VICTOR HUALDE CAME TO THIS VICINITY FORTY YEARS AGO

Early day residents of this vicinity, prior to there being a series, are recalling memories and incidents in the life of Victor Hualde, who located in this vicinity, originally in 1896. Hualde's body was found late Thursday evering, washed up in the surf between Newport Beach and Balboa. He was seventy-four years old. Oldtimers here state that at one time Victor Hualde dry-farmed as much as 9,000 acres a season in this vicinity, including the present townsite of Brea. For a time, it is remembered, he lived in a house in what is now southeast Brea,

Following the finding of the body in the surf, it remained unidentified for a time, or until relatives investigated and claimed it. He had been twice married. His first wife was the former Mrs. Oxarart, formerly of the Norwalk vicinity. She and four children came then to this locality with Hualde.

He is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Marie Hualde of Orange, whom also he had married later in life as a widow. He is survived also by two daughters; Mrs. Mauricia Spring of La Habra and Miss Marcelina Hualde of Santa Barbara, where she is the visiting nurse for that city. The four step-children also survive Mrs. Mary Brock of Hutchison, Kansas, Samuel Oxarart of Balboa, and Joseph and John Oxarart of La Habra.

BREA — Local pioneer and civic volunteer Frank Holly, 77, died Sunday at his Brea residence.

A member of the first Brea-Olinda High School football team, Mr. Holly contributed his time and expertise toward helping youth in the community. He donated and installed the first lighting system at the BOHS baseball field so Little League teams could enjoy nighttime play. And he was instrumental in setting up the electrical system at Arovista Park in the southwest portion of Brea.

Additionally, Mr. Holly contributed the $1,500 ham radio antenna perched atop St. Jude Hospital in Fullerton for the use of the ham radio club located in the rehabilitation unit of the hospital.

pull ramber Hoad peginning

Several years ago, Mr. Holly was honored as a pioneer of Brea, and his name was inscribed in a permanent Pioneer Plaque installed at City Hall Park. His memories of early Brea were recorded by Cal State Fullerton students in the oral history program.

Throughout his business career, he was involved in ham radio work, often helping in emergency situations. Most recently, he communicated with earthquake victims in South America, learning of their needs following untimely disasters.

Mr. Holly, preceded in death by his wife Lenore in 1979, is survived by sons Richard of Huntington Beach and Don'of Yorba Linda, and seven grandchildren.

Graveside services are planned for Tuesday at 2 p.m. at Loma Vista Memorial Park in Fullerton. Additional service information may be obtained by calling Neels Brea Mortuary at (714) 529-2194.

Celebrating New Year's with gunfire dangerous, illegal

By Andrew Sheridan

For some, New Year's Eve festivities aren't complete without breaking out the old Colt .45 and sending a few rounds airborne.

It seems a harmless way to celebrate, except that one gunman's fun often is the next guy's burden.

Bullets, police warn, can't defy gravity. After reaching the summit of their skyward arc, they scream back to earth with enough velocity to damage property or kill innocent bystanders.

But police say they're hardpressed to root out playful gunmen because their activities are difficult to pinpoint. Thus, police add, society's only hope in the fight against the meanor, according to ordinances in those cities. Perpetrators also could face prosecution under state law on weapons charges or for assault with a deadly weapon if stray bullets strike somebody. Fines or jail time could ensue.

"Every year around New Year's and the day after, we get reports about holes in roofs and houses," La Habra Police Capt. Herb Johnson said. "But it's hard to trace where a bullet came from. I could fire a bullet into the air from the police station (at Euclid Street and La Habra Boulevard) and it could land somewhere on Beach Boulevard.

"I know of times when bullets have crashed down through ceilings while people

The woman was last listed in fair condition at UCI Medical Center. Police questioned her brother for assault with a deadly weapon and confiscated his .32-caliber handgun.

Earlier Christmas Eve, Fullerton police arrested a resident on gun charges after shots were heard in the 200 block of Elm Avenue.

But that was a rare case. On many occasions, gunmen hide in their backyards or flee from where they fire. Other times, residents who report illegal shooting refuse to step forward as witnesses for prosecution purposes.

"Our hands are tied," Johnson said.

MRS. EDA HURST A RESIDENT TWENTY-FOUR YEARS

(By Alvin Almgren)

(This is another of the series of articles, written by members of the Brea-Olinda high school journalism class.)

Mrs. Eda Hurst, a resident of Brea for 24 years, was born in Gades county, Nebraska. In the summer of 1913 she moved to Brea from Taft.

from Taft.

When Mrs. Hurst came here, Pomona street was a dirt road, only wide enough for two vehicles to pass. The closest town that had paved roads was Whittier.

Practically all of the business establishments here at that time carried oil well equipment or did work connected with oil wells. The Standard Oil company had a shop work connected with oil wells. The Standard Oil company had a shop on the ground where the Duro Engineering now stands. The Specialty Tool company now has the location of the old Union Tool company. There were two supply companies here then, the Oil Well Supply and the National Supply. The old country school house, which was located in the north end of Pomona avenue, is now occu-of Pomona avenue, is now occu-pled by the Union Oil company. The trucking company, that was here then, was owned by Huddle-stons. The Pacific Electric depot was also here.

Miss Mable McGee and Harry

Ray were clerks for the Stern and Goodman Mercantile company, which was located on the north-eastern corner of Pomona and Birch streets. Ed Peterkin owned a butcher shop and Salvesons a grocery store.

A few of the men, who were managers or superintendents of the various oil companies at that time were: Pat Mailey of the West Coast Oil company; Abe West Coast Oil company; Abe
Yost, of the Brea Canyon Oil company; Bill Cammerdine of the Associated Oil company; "Warpy"
Brown of the Union Oil company;
With Brown of the Careal Pa-Mike Burrows of the General Pe troleum Oil company; and Jo Royer of the Birch Oil company.

There were two doctors in Bres when Mrs. Hurst came, Dr. Davis and Dr. Charleston. The Home and Dr. Charleston. The Home Cleaners now occupy Dr. Charleston's old office.

The business district of Brea The business district of Brea was on the far northern part of Pomona, when it first started. When Julius Deitzel started building a house south of Birch street, people laughed at him because they did not think the town would ever build that far south. Now it is the first house south of the bank building.

dance, which would last until about midnight, they would have a real feed. They also had a picnic every feed. They also had a picnic every y winter on the Emery lease.

The people in those days saw I more of the big league baseball the players than the people of Brea do today. The Standard Oil company had a baseball team, whose line-up included many big league players. A few of these were tharry Hughes, Spot McMurdo, Art Fromme, a pitcher from the New York Giants, and Truck Hannah, the catcher who is now the manager of the Los Angeles Angels.

Mrs. Hurst thinks that Brea is the only town in the state. The people of Brea are not bothered with fog as those in the towns surrounding, and there is no danger of floods as the city is up by itself. This year was the first time in the 24 years that Mrs. Hurst's flowers froze.

A MOVEY ROLE Hyde Brean For Twenty Years

> STARTS AS AN EDUCATIONAL CENTER IMPORTANT

The start of Brea as an educational center constitutes the most outstanding thing to occur here during the past twenty years, or since he has been a citizen here, according to Luther W. Hyde of North Pomona avenue. He has been in this vicinity since 1916, coming here to work in the field department of the Union Oil company.

Mr. Hyde is a native of Champaign, Illinois. He left the east in 1906 and came to California. He first located in Ventura County, where he made his home in Santa Paula and it was ten years later that he came to Brea, accompanied by his wife and family.

It is his belief that advancement of any locality is impossible without educational facilities. The without equicational facilities. The comparison of Brea twenty years ago, with the population of today, is very interesting. It was in 1916 and the month of December that and the month of December unat the first educational activity, which was the Brea grammar school, was completed. There were not many local attendants, be-cause of the size of the town, but it was not long before suburban districts were sending students to Brea grammar. Upon completion of this building, work soon started on the Laurel school building. Only a few years later, plans were laid for, a high school. He says Brea, go one; so must we." Orange Was The Only

When Mr. Hyde came to Brea there was only one street that Sheppard, on the first ballot. went east, and that was Orange. Also, at that time, there were only a few streets running north and south. They were Madrona, Walnut and Pomona. Like many other developments, at the time of its beginning, Brea in reality was merely a barley field. Mr. Hyde remembers well the moving of, the Congregational church from the corner of Birch and Pomona to the corner of

Flower and Imperial highway. The Oilfields National Bank was soon placed on the former lot. The Union Tool Works was among the first companies to locate in Brea. It was superseded by the Specialty Oilfield company. Then came Duro Engineering company, followed by Shaffer Tool Works. Immediately after business life began operating, church work was started, and next came its organizations. To Mr. Hyde, education along with a city of churches, was Brea's beginning He and his fam-only a few streets running north and south. They were Madrona, Walnut and Pomona. Like many other developments, at the time of its beginning, Brea in reality was merely a barley field.

Mr. Hyde remembers well the moving of, the Congregational church from the corner of Birch and Pomona to the corner of Flower and Imperial highway. The Oilfields National Bank was soon placed on the former lot. The Union Tool Works was among the first companies to locate in Brea. It was superseded by the Specialty Oilfield company. Then came Duro Engineering company, followed by Shaffer Tool Works.

Immediately after business life began operating, church work was started, and next came its organizations. To Mr. Hyde, education along with a city of churches, was Brea's beginning He and his family have witnessed the greatest developments that have taken place in Brea.

Drug Store Postoffice

Imagine entering Brea twenty years ago and finding a post office within a drug store, a department store, and two markets. Advancements have been made and were started with a populus of approximately 750. At that time, there were two newspapers in this vicinity. They were the "Star" and the "Brea Progress."

Speaking once more about Brea, Mr. Hyde says he is happy to have TRY A PROGRESS WANT AD! found this city, because of its

PASSES SUDDENLY

The numerous Brea friends of J. W. ("Wallie") Hurst were saddened Monday evening when the news reached this city from the Elks Club at Anaheim that he had dropped dead from hardening of the arteries to the heart h short time after he had arrived there for the evening where he was rooming.

"Wallie," as he was affectionately known here, was in apparent fine health when he left for the club a short time before his sudden demise, although he had, on several occasions, spoken to his friends here of pluratic pains in his left side. This was thought, however, to be only from cold and was given no serious consideration neither by himself or his friends.

Mr. Hurst was 39 years old and had been in this city for several years, operating until just recently, the Hurst Taxi service at the Brea Garage. He sold his taxi service business last spring to Mr. Crooke and entered into the insurance business with V. W. Russell, handling New York Life.

Funeral services were conducted this (Friday) morning at 10 o'clock from the McAulay parlors at Fullerton under the direction of the Ana heim Elks and was one of the largest ever attended from Brea.

Mr. Hurst leaves a widow and two children in Kansas to mourn his sudden demise.

Whittier Giants Lose to Union

The baseball game Sunday between the Whittier Giants and Bill Kuhn's Union Oilers at Brea Bowl, was a falk away for the Oilers to the tune of 17 to 2. The pitching of Vance was a feature, striking out 15 men and allowing only six hits. And the hitting of Griffoz and Me-Gregor and Schryer and a home run by Wesser, and the fielding of Voltmer, Welin and Fields, and the catching and throwing to bases of Pettigrew were features.

The attendance was fine, about 500 being in attendance and the good natured rooting added pep to the game. The unmpiring of Mc-Clellan of Fullerton and Mooney of Whittier was near perfect and they are men who are capable of handling an indicator in a high class league, retaining the respect of both

Early day residents of this vicinity, prior to there being a Brea, are recalling memories and incidents in the life of Victor Hualde, who located in this vicinity; originally in 1896. Hualde's body was found late Thursday everling, washed up in the surf between Newport Beach and Balboa. He was seventy-four years old.

Oldtimers here state that at one time Victor Hualde dry-farmed as much as 9,000 acres a season in this vicinity, including the present townsite of Brea. For a time, it is remembered, he lived in a house in what is now southeast Brea, near the present "Warpy" Brown residence. Later he lived on a ranch in the Deodora street neighborhood and planted the orchards in that vicinity.

He sold some of his holdings when the oil boom struck this locality, including the eighty acres now owned by the Associated just south of this city. He remained prominent here for more than thirty years.

Following the finding of the body in the surf, it remained unidentified for a time, or until relatives investigated and claimed it. He had been twice married. His first wife was the former Mrs. Oxarart, formerly of the Norwalk vicinity. She and four children came then to this locality with Hualde.

He is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Marie Hualde of Orange, whom also he had married later in life as a widow. He is survived also by two daughters; Mrs. Mauricia Spring of La Habra and Miss Marcelina Hualde of Santa Barbara, where she is the visiting nurse for that city. The four step-children also survive Mrs. Mary Brock of Hutchison, Kansas, Samuel Oxarart of Balboa, and Joseph and John Oxarart of La Habra.

In recent years Mr. Hualde had lived with his second wife on a citrus tract near the Orange county park.

Funeral services were held for Mr. Hualde on Sunday and Monday. There was a recitation of the Holy Rosary in the McAulay-Suters chapel Sunday evening and services Monday morning in the St. Mary's Catholic church of Fullerton. Burial was in the Calvary cemetery of Los Angeles.

J. N. HURST ANSWERS LAST SUMMONS

Isaac N. Hurst, aged 71, died Monday morning, April 5, at the family home at 201 North Pomona following an illness of many months.

Mr. Hurst had been a resident of Brea for the past nine years, being one of the pioneers in the real estate business in this town. For the past several years and up to the time of his death he had been constable in this district and in the conduct of this office he was noted for his kindness and consideration and his unfailing justice in all cases.

Mr. Hurst, lovingly known by everyone in Brea as "Pap Hurst" is survived by three sons; Fred, until recently a resident of Brea but now living in Ventura; Floyd, of Long Beach; J. L. Hurst of Brea; one daughter, Mrs. Bessie Snyder, of Wymore Nebraska, who is on her way here to attend the funeral services of her father. Forrest Hurst, Manager of the Brea Boiler Works, is a Funeral services are to be held in the chapel of McAuley & Suters of Fullerton tomorrow afternoon, conducted by Rev. John J. Bell, of the local Baptist church, of which Mr. Hurst had long been a member.

Knew Brea When It Was Young

MRS. EDA HURST A RESIDENT TWENTY-FOUR YEARS

(By Alvin Almgren)

(This is another of the series of articles, written by members of the Brea-Olinda high school journalism class.)

Mrs. Eda Hurst, a resident of Brea for 24 years, was born in Gades county, Nebraska. In the summer of 1913 she moved to Brea from Taft.

mona street was a dirt road, only flowers froze. wide enough for two vehicles to pass. The closest town that had paved roads was Whittier.

Practically all of the business establishments here at that time carried oil well equipment or did work connected with oil wells. The Standard Oil company had a shop on the ground where the Duro Engineering now stands. The Specialty Tool company now has the location of the old Union Tool company. There were two supply companies here then, the Oil Well

Supply and the National Supply. The old country school house, which was located in the north end of Pomona avenue, is now occupied by the Umon Oil company. The trucking company, that was here then, was owned by Huddlestons. The Pacific Electric depot was also here.

Miss Mable McGee and Harry Ray were clerks for the Stern and Goodman Mercantile company, which was located on the north-eastern corner of Pomona and Birch streets. Ed Peterkin owned a butcher shop and Salvesons a grocery store.

A few of the men, who were managers or superintendents of the various oil companies at that time were: Pat Mailey of the West Coast Oil company; Abe Yost, of the Brea Canyon Oil company; Bill Cammerdine of the As-sociated Oil company; "Warpy" Brown of the Union Oil company; Mike Burrows of the General Petroleum Oil company; and Joe Royer of the Birch Oil company.

There were two doctors in Brea when Mrs. Hurst came, Dr. Davis and Dr. Charleston. The Home Cleaners now occupy Dr. Charleston's old office.

The business district of Brea was on the far northern part of Pomona, when it first started. When Julius Deitzel started building a house south of Birch street, people laughed at him because they did not think the town would ever build that far south. Now it is the first house south of the bank building.

As to recreation, the citizens were not beat any by the present day methods. They had a hall on the Murphy Coyote lease, to which they could go every other Satur-day night to dance. After the

The people in those days saw more of the big league baseball players than the people of Brea do today. The Standard Oil com-pany had a baseball team, whose line-up included many big league players. A few of these were players. A few of Harry Hughes, Spot McMurdo, Art Fromme, a pitcher from the New York Giants, and Truck Hannah, the catcher who is now the manager of the Los Angeles Angels.

Mrs. Hurst thinks that Brea is the only town in the state. The people of Brea are not bothered with fog as those in the towns surrounding, and there is no danger of floods as the city is up by itself. This year was the first time When Mrs. Hurst came here, Po- in the 24 years that Mrs. Hurst's

The Walnut Crop

Just what the walnut crop will be the earon is hard to product. It is now va riously estimated at from practicals nothing to two-thirds of a stone bloom growers are of the opinion that it will be along towards the middle of June is fore anything like an accurate estimate of the crop can be made. The weather has also had the effect of increasing the walnut discase, the stems being caten up. Where this loss occurred, however, - Krowth line put out, and if the proves good and produces nuts the cropwill be fair, but if it does not, the cropwill be light.
