Special Report: Brea comes to life after long snooze

BREA CONTRASTS — Brea Civic Cultural Center, built in 1980, frames main building at Brea Olinda High School, built in 1926.

To hear Brea's civic boosters tell it, nothing much happened in this northern Orange County city between the discovery of oil and the coming of the freeways.

"This city started as a result of the oil boom, and then it just sat there until 1970," quips Al Gobar, an economist based in Brea.

But in late 1971, work was completed on the Orange Freeway (Route 57) from Santa Ana through Brea heading north to Diamond Bar, just over the county line, and beyond to Pomona. Once the freeway was in place, Orange County's economic prosperity began to rub off on Brea.

Poised at the common border between Orange, Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties, Brea was ideally located to draw upon the workforce and the buying public from a broad spectrum of the Los Angeles basin. With the freeway suddenly providing access, Brea experienced its second economic boom. The population nearly doubled, from 18,000 in 1970 to 32,000 today, and employment in the city jumped to 100,000.

The most often cited evidence of that growth was the Brea Mall, which opened in 1977. The first major retail center in the city, the mall formed the focus of a new surge of development along the freeway corridor.

The biggest growth industry in Brea so far has been one what city official called "paper moving." Security Pacific Bank established a check processing center in Brea in 1981 that employs 1,500 people. Similarly, several insurance companies have established major operations centers in the city, including Allstate, Travelers, CNA, St. Paul Insurance group and Home Insurance Co., employing as many as several hundred people each in policy and claims processing.

Suzuki Motors established its U.S. headquarters in Brea in 1981 to distribute motorcycles and outboard motors. It has since been expanded to handle distribution of Suzuki's popular Samurai four-wheel-drive vehicle.

"With the freeway and the mall, the town leapfrogged from its lazy, quiet days to a real urban community," says Bill Kelly, the city's development services director.

Local officials and business executives point to several reasons for Brea's attractiveness to firms employing large numbers of blue-collar and clerical workers.

"One advantage we have is availability of land," says Paulette Ramsey, the technical services manager for the city. "A lot of cities in Orange County are built out. If you want to build something there, you have to tear something else down. But we still have a large amount of land for industrial development."

Brea also is easily accessible from much of northern Orange County, San Bernardino County and southern Los Angeles County, which makes it attractive to companies seeking a diverse work force.

"We're close enough to Los Angeles so you can get there," says Gobar. "But we're also accessible to the big labor pool of the Inland Empire, and the labor force that is migrating north in Orange County due to the jobs.

"As a result, we are attractive to businesses that are relatively labor intensive."

In the early days, Brea was home to what then was another labor-intensive industry: oil. In those days, Brea was known as Randolph, after Epes Randolph, the engineering genius who laid out the Pacific Electric Railway lines in Orange County in the early 1900s.

Brea Canyon was the site of the first oil wells drilled in Southern California sometime in the mid-1860s. By the late 1880s, when the oil discoveries were coming in a steady stream, two area oilmen got together, bought a lease and set up their own company. The two men were Wallace Hardison and Lyman Stewart. The company they formed was called Union Oil. And the lease they bought included much of what is now Brea.

Although the Brea wells have diminished in importance, oil remains a key piece of Brea's economic picture. Union Oil, now known as Unocal, continues as an important presence in Brea with its research center, employing about 1,000 people, as well as a chemical processing plant.

Buoyed by the spurt of economic growth in the 1970s and early 1980s, Brea civic leaders also paid heed to quality-of-life considerations by instituting an unusual outdoor art program.

Brea at a glance

Current Population:	32,000
Population — 1950:	3,200
Population — 1970:	18,446
Median Age:	30 years
Median Family Income:	$28,515
Working Population:	100,000
Property Valuation:	$1.2 billion
Median Priced Home:	$125,000
1983 Retail Sales:	$358 million
Area:	10 sq. mi.

Under the program, every development in the city of more than $500,000 is required to commission a piece of outdoor art — sculptures, murals and the like — with the cost and quality subject to city approval, according to Clarice Blamer, a city council member and former mayor. So far, there are more than 65 pieces, some by nationally and internationally known artists, she said.

"Our goal is to keep or enhance the image of the city," says Blamer. "We want to mitigate the problems of growth as we go along. Growth is fine, but it needs to be done in a well-planned, strategic, thinking process."

In the wake of Proposition 13, several civic leaders also founded the Brea Foundation, to help finance arts and recreational activities. The chief assets of the foundation are the old City Hall and Police Department buildings, which the city donated after completing its new Civic Cultural Center in 1981. With an annual budget of about $200,000 (80 percent of which comes from the buildings' rent), the foundation finances a summer music festival and teen employment programs to help improve the city's parks, according to Wayne Maris, a foundation director.

What is lacking, however, is a parallel development of residential property in the city, where the median house costs $125,000, according to several people involved in Brea's development.

"Several years ago housing in Brea was medium to moderately priced. Today that is no longer the case," said Philip Nathan, a Brea executive who heads the city's volunteer Economic Development Committee. "Typical houses in many neighborhoods might cost $200,000. So we need more of a mix of apartments, condos and single-family housing."

But Nathan points to the city's ambitious downtown redevelopment project as an encouraging sign that the city is tackling the housing problem.

The redevelopment project ultimately will encompass a 300-acre parcel in the center of the city, including about 75 acres of the old downtown area that will become Brea Town Plaza. The development will be a mixed-use project that will include moderate-priced housing.

"Our goal is to remember our roots, but to redevelop the old buildings, many of which are structurally unsound," says Kelly.

Another project will see the Brea-Olinda High School — which is being replaced by a new campus near the freeway — turned into an office-retail complex, according to Kelly.

Taken together, the development and the persistent attention to amenities such as the outdoor arts program and the cultural events sponsored by the Brea Foundation, have forged a stronger community identity among Brea's residents, according to Foundation director Maris.

"People used to be a little bit sheepish about saying they lived in Brea," Maris recalls. "There even was a bumper sticker that said something like, 'Where the Hell's Brea?' But in the past few years that has changed.

"People are looking around at their community and saying, this is pretty darned nice place to live."

ABOUT THE COVER

Original pen & ink gouache painting by local artist Judi Smith Trasport. Published by the City of Brea Communications & Marketing Department.

CITY OF BREA
BREA, CALIFORNIA
(Orange County)

Brea's name is of Spanish derivation, meaning "tar", or "asphalt". Its name was taken from the canyon at whose mouth our community has grown. In the early days of California, and even after statehood, settlers from the Pomona Valley and the Santa Ana valley came to "Brea" Canyon to cut chunks of the oil-soaked earth from the canyon walls for use as fuel in heating their homes.

Because of this evidence of "black gold", oil men of the 1890's attempted development of an oil field in the Puente Hills at the present northern boundaries of Brea. Because of the inadequacies of drilling equipment of the era, early development was slow.

In 1894, the Union Oil Company of California purchased about 1200 acres from the Stearns Ranch Co., and began their oil development in 1895-96. Wells were drilled and oil was produced in ever-increasing quantities. The Stearns property became very valuable to Union Oil Co., in both oil and gas production. Other oil companies, following Union's success, purchased acreage in the area, and the Brea and Olinda oil-field were major factors in the California oil boom of the early 1900's. Included among the oil firms of the area, at various times of its growth, were Brea Canyon Oil Co.; Columbia Oil Production Co.; E. L. Doheny; Chansolor-Western Oil Co.; Standard Oil Co.; Shell Oil Co.; and the Birch Oil Co.

In 1908, the Ontario Investment Co. filed a subdivision map for a town to be named Randolph, located just south of the mouth of Brea Canyon on the relatively flat mesa. It was a part of the Randolph School District, which at this time had a two-story frame school building on the corner of what is now North Brea Blvd. and West Deodara. Following subdivision filing, interest apparently was dropped for a time.

On January 19, 1911 a new map was filed for the same subdivision, for the purpose of changing the name from Randolph to Brea. Streets running north and south were names: Madrona; Walnut; Pomona (now called Brea Blvd.); Orange; and Flower. Streets running east and west were named: La Habra St. (now named Ash St.); Fifth Street (now Birch St.); and Sixth Street (later changed to Cedar Street...and now named Imperial Highway).

Then building began, both for homes and for small service industry serving the oil fields. Brea became a growing community under the government of the County Board of Supervisors. Retail stores, hotels, barber shops, building and oilfield supply firms, began establishing their business in Brea rather than Olinda, the booming oilfield town in Carbon Canyon.

SIGNIFICANT STEPS IN BREA'S GROWTH

1912 - The Pacific Electric Railway extended its tracks through Brea to Yorba Linda, planning to continue them eventually up the Santa Ana Canyon to Corona - a plan which did not materialize.

1913 - The Congregational Church was founded in April. Later in the year, the Church of the Nazarene was organized. And, in 1913, an additional school building was added to the Randolph School.

1914 - The Christian Church was founded, October 17th, building the church on Ash Street which was occupied by the congregation until moving to present location in 1963.

1915 - The School Board acquired land from Union Oil Company on the northeast corner of Deodara and Pomona (Brea Blvd.), and the district approved a $140,000 bond issue for a new school.

1916 - The new school opened for the 1916-17 school year with 11 teachers for the eight grades. This school, with additions, enlargements and improvements to the site, is the present Brea Junior High School.

1917 - By election on February 23, 1917, after more than a year of negotiations and petitions, Brea was incorporated with a population of 732. City officials elected were: J. C. Sexton, Mayor; M. J. McCarty; P. C. Huddleston; Isaac Craig and R. H. Mitchell, Councilmen; Charles C. Kinsler, City Clerk, and Leon A. Sayles, City Treasurer. In May, 1917, M. J. McCarty resigned and the Board of Trustees elected Frank J. Schweitzer, Sr., to fill the unexpired term. With subsequent re-elections, Mr. Schweitzer served 20 years on the Brea City Council.

The City Council appointed W. J. Renshaw as City Engineer; Harry Winchell, City Marshall; D. O. Stegeman, Water and Street Supt.; W. L. Moore, Fire Chief; M. C. Fiscus, Recorder; T. Elwood Moore, Building Inspector; and Albert Launer, City Attorney.

On May 9, 1917, Brea street names were changed to represent types of trees. La Habra Street was selected as the dividing line, and its name changed to Ash Street. Streets to the north of Ash Street became: Bracken; Cypress; and Deodara. Streets to the south of Ash Street became: Birch; Cedar (now named Imperial Highway); Date; Elm; and Fir.

In July 1917, arrangements were made with Southern California Edison Company to furnish power and plans for Brea's first street lighting system.

And so Brea began to grow, with $5,889.40 received as first-year taxes, on an assessed valuation of $417,600.

1920 - Brea American Legion Post 181 was organized January 5th. Two bond issues were approved ($40,000 and $20,000) to purchase the water reservoir, equipment and water shares from the Chaffey interest; as well as additional pipe and supplies to enlarge the system.

1921 - The Brea Canyon Road, leading to Pomona, was started. A Brea branch of the Orange County Free Library was opened. A $40,000 bond issue was approved for erecting a tank and tower at the reservoir site; an 18-inch water main was laid down in Pomona Ave. (Brea Blvd.); water meters and fire hydrants were installed for the first time. The Brea-Olinda oil-fields produced nearly 3-million barrels of oil from 396 wells. And the Brea Elementary School District approved a $60,000 bond issue for building Laurel School on its present site.

1922 - March 7, 1922, marked the grand opening of the Red Lantern Theatre, with music by the Brea Municipal Band before the doors were thrown open to a surprised public for the first look at the oriental decorations and to hear the Robert Morgan pipe organ. Opening night film starred Bebe Daniels.

On August 10, 1922, the Brea Lions Club was chartered. A $150,000 bond issue provided curb-to-curb pavement for Pomona Ave. (Brea Blvd.), with curbs and hard surfacing for the streets on both sides of the main boulevard. And three tracts of land were opened to encourage home building.

1924 - An exhibition baseball game starring Walter Johnson and Babe Ruth was held on October 31, 1924, on the ground east of the present flood-control channel and south of Deodara.

A down payment was made, subject to approval of park site plans, on the first two lots of the proposed City Hall and City Park location.

1925 - The Brea First Baptist Church was founded; the Brea Woman's Club was organized; and Brea's first telephone exchange began service. The Brea-Olinda Union High School District was formed, withdrawing from the Fullerton Union High School District. And a $60,000 bond issue was approved to build Brea's own sewage-disposal plant (on the site of our present golf course).

1926 - February 20, 1926, voters approved the 23 1/2 acre site on east Birch Street for the Brea-Olinda Union High School. Three building units were erected and the cornerstone laid on October 20th. The Assembly of God Church organized its congregation. The Congregational Church moved to its present location at Flower and Imperial. Citrol Lodge No. 356, F. & A. M., received its charter in October. 1926 was also the year of the fire at the Steart tank farm and refinery, caused by lightning and destroying several large reservoirs, the refinery, and vast quantities of stored crude oil.

1927 - The $60,000 bond issue, for purchase of land from Union Oil Co. for the City Park and City Hall, was approved by the voters. However, building did not start at once, due to extreme care in settling on plans for the building and the park development.

1929 - Brea City Hall was completed and occupied.

1932 - First Radio equipment installed in Brea police cars.

1933 - 80 mile-an-hour windstorm inflicted severe damange to many buildings in Brea, and blew down 15 rigs in the Brea and Olinda oil fields. The Long Beach earthquake rocked homes in the Brea area, but with little damage.

1936 - The Brea Lion's and Woman's Clubhouse was completed and dedicated on March 13.

1938 - The present route of Imperial Highway was opened between Brea and Yorba Linda. Pacific Electric Railway discontinued its passenger service to Brea and Yorba Linda. The Brea Rifle Club and the International Coffee Club were organized. Cloudbursts and heavy rainfall brought flash floods down Brea Canyon and Brea Creek, bringing destruction to areas in the lower lands of Fullerton and Atwood.

1946 - Brea voted to join the Metropolitan Water District.

1947 - The Junior Woman's Club was organized. The biggest inch gas lines were completed through Brea on Deodara, bringing natural gas from New Mexico and Arizona to the Los Angeles metropolitan area. And Colorado River water flowed for the first time into Brea water mains from the lines of the Metropolitan Water District.

The following years have brought growth and change to Brea with the addition of both large and small industries; more housing development; enlarged commercial areas; enlarged school systems; all contributing to the present community of Brea, a good place in which to live and make a living.

1951 - Kirkhill Rubber Company opened its doors in Brea.

1954 - Masonic Temple was completed at Imperial Highway and Magnolia Street.

1957 - Memory Gardens Memorial Park launched burial services on 65 acres.

1960 - Mueller Company became a part of the growing community of Brea. Amercoat also opened its doors.

1962 - Brea opened its first Postal Contract Station.

1964 - Oil and Gas Searchers drilled an accumulative depth of 36,000 miles this year.

Brea, from 1965 to present, has experienced more change that it has since its incorporation in 1917. To prepare for this situation, and in attempt to avoid the mistakes of other California communities, the City Council of 1965 authorized the application for federal funds to help finance the cost of preparing a long range comprehensive General Plan. Such funds were available to smaller cities to help promote better planning the development of a General Plan.

Brea's new Fire Department Headquarters located on Berry Street was dedicated in November, 1965. This was the first new municipal building since completion of the City Hall in 1929.

On August 24, 1965, Brea voters overwhelmingly approved the sale of $3,750,000 worth of revenue bonds to provide for the construction of new water storage facilities and the expansion of the City's Water system.

In 1965, the Brea Police Department purchased its first radar unit.

In 1966, Brea Elementary, Olinda Elementary and the Brea Olinda Unified School Districts unifies into the BOUS District. The Brea Jr. Woman's Club worked closely and cooperated with the Brea Fire Department and sponsored the fire home inspection program. In 1966, the Federal Government granted the application and the contract to develop the General Plan.

In 1967, Brea marked its 50th Birthday. It also marked the construction of the first segment of the Orange Freeway from the Riverside Freeway north to Orangethorpe Avenue in Fullerton. In that same year, the Brea Marines Weekend Program, because of the desires of the Brea community to express its appreciation for the efforts of the Marines destined for Vietnam, was begun.

In 1968, the City Council initiated a Community Leaders Forum. The forums covered a wide range of subjects related to City services and the community in general. In July of 1968, Carbon Canyon Fire Stationed opened. Brea's Police and Fire Department launched a cadet program where college students 18 and over assisted regular officers with some of the more routine services.

After over three years of negotiating, the City Council adopted a General Plan for the City of Brea. The objective of the General Plan was to provide a guide for the growth and development of Brea in accordance with the needs and desires of the citizen of today and the future. 1967 saw the adoption of one phase, the Master Plan of Streets and HIghways. In March, 1968, the remaining two phases, Land Use Element and Standards for Population Density and Building Intensity, were adopted.

As supplements to the General Plan, two additional planning studies began in the latter part of 1968. One involves the determination and design of a site for a civic center. The central area of Brea, including most of the major business district and the grater part of the original town development is the subject of the other study. The objective is to develop policies and programs to guide changes in these older parts of the City and promote the revitalization and strengthening of the downtown area.

It should be noted that during preparation of the General Plan, the active participation of civic groups and individual citizens was encouraged. The suggestions and comments received provided the direction needed by the City Council, Planning Commission and City Staff as they formulated the plan. Combined with a new zoning ordinance, subdivision ordinance and master plan for storm drains and sewers, the General Plan should offer the potential for a future Brea worthy of the high quality of its citizens and reflective of their wishes.

The present City Manager Wayne D. Wedin was appointed on August 12, 1968. He was among the youngest city managers and a homegrown boy.

In 1969, residents witnessed a major expansion of leisure time activities including the re-establishment of "Summer Concerts in the Park", development of an active preschool program, expansion of the well-known plunge and swimming program, the initiation of an Annual Christmas Tree Lighting Program, and the establishment of a Tiny Tot area in cooperation with the Junior Woman's Club.

In response to citizen requests, a cable television company was located in Brea.

A new population of 18,500 was announced on the basis of the 1970 Federal Census and four Brea youths were publicly recognized for risking their lives to pull a lady from a burning building. During 1970, perhaps one of the most significant single public improvements in Brea's history was completed and brought into contact with the City. This improvement was the new Orange Freeway that was completed to Imperial Highway.

A unique program for law enforcement was started during 1970 with the City of Brea servicing the law enforcement requirements of Yorba Linda through a contractual relationship between the two cities. In that same year, with ground growth dry, a series of fires broke out in southern California with major fires bringing a real threat for the safety of Brea.

For the golfers in the area, the 1970 opening of the Imperial Golf Course was a pleasant event and the developed course did much to beautify the area.

The first exchange as part of the Brea Lagos de Moreno Sister City Program occurred.

During this year with an official Brea delegation visited the Sister City to start the People-to-People Friendship effort.

Of major importance during 1971 were the announcements that a large shopping center developer was planning to construct a regional shopping center in Brea. In addition, a specific development was announced for a West Coast distribution outlet for Albertson's Markets.

For the first time in its history, the City of Brea, in 1971, formally adopted a member of the armed services, who is missing in action in Southeast Asis. With the adoption of Captain Steve Hanson, it is believed that Brea became one of the first, if not the first, to bring formal community recognition to the plight of our POW's and MIA's. Strong community support for Captain Hanson and his family have been forthcoming with official adoption of Captain Hanson by the high school students and numerous special programs carried out in the community to bring and maintain attention on the POW issue.

With the opening of the Orange Freeway in 1971 to Tonner Canyon northbound and Lambert Road southbound, another important step was reached in the completion of this important circulation element. During 1972, the remaining portion of the freeway was completed northbound to the Pomona freeway, allowing Brea citizens ease of access to the total Southern California Freeway system.

Like many other communities in Southern California, Brea was jolted by the February 9th earthquake; however, the community was very fortunate ans sustained extremely minor, if any, damage. The disaster prompted additional reviews of City development standards relative to construction, to make sure that all precautions possible had been taken to protect community residents in the event of future earthquake occurrences.

In 1973, Johnson House decided to redevelop downtown "Good Old Brea" area, in the two and one-half block area along and adjacent to Brea Blvd. between Imperial Highway and the Pacific Electric tracks. Homart Development Company made a decision to have a regional shopping center to be named Brea Mall.

In 1973, Mrs. Carole Hanson, wife of Brea's adopted Missing in Action Marine Corps major helicopter rescue pilot, believed her hsuband was killed on the ground in Laos in 1967 after his aircraft was shot down. In that same year, Orange County Transit District started bus services through Brea.

Arovista Elementary School won the highest Environmental Protection Agency award.

In 1974, the first phase of Ted Craig Regional Park was opened for public use and construction started in the new Carbon Canyon Regional Park. Both County projects made available almost 400 acres of land in their first phases. 1974 also saw the first discussions of a special lease with the Shell Oil Company whereby 1100 acres of land were made available to the City of Brea for leisure-time use by the public. Substantial progress was also made in terms of bringing the Tri-City Park area to a point where it could be used by the public.

Extremely significant and unique activity took place during 1974 as the City of Brea became involved in the Social Services area of concern. This effort was made possible through a grant from Orange County which gave Brea the capability to really coordinate programs of benefit to its older citizens as well as others in the community.

The world's record for non-stop swinging was broken in the City Hall Park by Debra Lynne Luesse and Melody Ann Tigue, swinging for 105 hours.

Brea was selected to receive special recognition as a Bicentennial City during 1974 and plans were soon underway for events during 1975 and 1976.

As 1975 commenced our Nation's 200th year anniversary celebration, the City responded by forming a Bicentennial Committee to serve as a clearing house for community-sponsored events. The committee's goal was to facilitate a year of commemorative activities which would best highlight our Nation's and our community's history colminating on Independence Day, July 4, 1976.

In February, 1975, the City of Brea spurred a cultural renaissance by accepting a general policy statement on community art and cultural planning. It emphasized the need for a joint public and privately supported art program to stimulate the placement of permanent art works such as paintings, fountains and sculptures. Throughout the community, there will be over thirty major art pieces displayed.

As we review the events of the 1976 Bicentennial year, it proved to be a year of high activity in the Community. High activity not only in the traditional events, but in an entire range of community involvement. 1976 was a very successful 4th of July celebration with a full range of events planned which included the dedication of a new gazebo in City Hall Park by the Brea Soroptimist Club, a community picnic, another grandstand-filled 4th of July Firework's Show, a visit from our Sister City in Lagos de Moreno, and the popular City Bonanza Days Parade and Carnival. 1976 also saw the opening of a new post office to meet the needs of the community and the ground breaking for the new Sears store in the Brea Mall. A special VIP Briefing was held during the last year with a capacity crowd in attendance and a unique grove of trees in Craig Regional Park was dedicated in honor of present and former members of the Brea City Council and a former Brea student now playing baseball with the San Diego Padres was recognized for being selected to receive the coveted Cy Young Award. That baseball pitcher is Randy Jones. William Fanning celebrated his 100th birthday during 1976 and Ted Craig his 80th. A new "gift tree" program was started in 1976 which gave anyone an opportunity to plant a tree in recognition of a loved one in one of the City's parks.

Without a doubt, one of the major stories of the year in Brea was the amount of development underway in the community. During 1976, the level of building permits issued exceeded 65 million dollars, up from the 29 million level of 1975. The development underway in the community represents a balance of housing, commercial and industrial projects designed to strengthen the communities life style and economy. Specific plans were announced for the opening of the Brea Mall, Brea Plaza, and the new Brea Financial center.

A special program to dedicate a new 30 million gallon covered water reservoir was held during the year and plans were started to improve drainage at Central and Steele.

In 1977, Brea celebrated its 60th birthday. Many activities were held in commermoration of the occasion.

The Brea Plaza opened in the spring with a variety of stores, including specialty shops, Albertson's Market, Thrifty Drug Store, four Mann movie theatres, Home Bank, and Financial Savings and numerous food establishments. The Municipal Plunge received its final face-lift during 1977 and opened in the summer with sounds of music throught the summer in City Hall Park with its summer concerts.

In summer and early fall, the long-awaited Brea Mall opened its doors. Sears and May Co. opened along with approximately 100 specialty shops. Under construction was the Broadway which was opened in October, 1978.

The Brea Financial Center was under construction and partially opened. This, in addition to a new combined Civic and Cultural Center, will serve as the hub of North Orange County. Architects and Planners call this the "Town Center" concept -- Brea calls it exciting.

In 1977, the City of Brea designated the property where the original City Yard was on Brea Boulevard and Ash Street for Senior Citizen housing. The Brea Rotary Club, combined with the Brea Ministerial Association, is planning to build approximately 30 units for senior citizens to occupy at a low rate of rent.

Your Community

by Frank Clement, Editor, Far West Factbooks.

When Spain's Don Gaspar de Portola, the first white man to visit the Brea area, made an overnight stop here in 1775, it is not true that two members of his party – Cliff and Steve Macon – remained behind, opened a tire and tow service, and patiently awaited the invention of the automobile.

However, in 1975, it is true that the many who have visited Brea over the years, fallen in love with the community and its life-style and remained to make it their home town can now look forward to seeing their Brea emerge as one of Orange County's most exciting cities of the 1980's.

Brea has that one priceless ingredient for growth that other cities may lack – land and more land.

The annexation of Carbon Canyon in 1960 did more than expand Brea to ten square miles and bring a lovely canyon within your city limits. It also extended your city to San Bernardino County on the east as well as Los Angeles County on the north and secured additional lands for future annexation when the time is right.

The most important date in Brea's history must be recorded as February 23, 1917 because it was on that date that Brea (Pop.: 732) became Orange County's eighth incorporated city.

But the most important date in terms of Brea's future – if not the date Carbon Canyon was annexed – could well be March 13, 1972. It was on that occasion that the Orange Freeway, running through Brea, was officially opened between the Pomona and Riverside Freeways, and Brea found itself no longer tucked away in an inaccesible corner of Orange County but, instead, thrust into the mainstream of life in Southern California.

The importance of a freeway to a community in terms of growth can be no better illustrated than by the immediate development of a major shopping center to be opened in Brea in 1976.

With growth comes problems, but only to the unprepared. And Brea's city fathers have long been dedicated to a planned growth that – while developing a balanced community embracing residential areas, business, and industry – will always protect the life-style that has made Brea the epitome of the California style of family living that places empahsis on outdoor recreational opportunities.

September 27 Breakfast Honors Police, Fire Departments

A Morning of Music and Magic

Chamber members are once again invited to host a member of the Brea Police or Fire Department at the annual Police and Fire Recognition Breakfast, slated for Friday, September 27 in the Community Room of the Brea Civic Center. This is a great morning of camaraderie and friendship as we pay tribute to the men and women who protect our community.

To host one or more guests, simply call the Chamber office at 529-4938. The cost is $9.00 per person. You will be paired with a guest the morning of the breakfast. Requests to host specific guests will be honored whenever possible; however, shift work in the departments may mean that your requested guest is not available.

The program for the morning will feature the father and son team of Roger and Jeffrey Garvin. The Garvins will entertain the crowd with a variety program featuring magic tricks, humor, and vocals. The Garvins appeared briefly at the Education Breakfast in April and were so good we wanted to have them back for an entire program.

Door prizes will be awarded to police and fire personnel only, so please bring a prize that morning so we'll have lots of goodies to give away to our special guests. The breakfast begins at 7:00 a.m. and reservations are a MUST! There are usually many more prospective hosts than police and fire employees, so if you want to host a guest please call early -guests will be assigned on a first-come, first-serve basis. Join us on September 27 and help us say thanks to a very special group of people.

Tickets will go on sale soon for the Chamber's annual Casino Night event. Home Bank of Brea will be the corporate sponsor, and Albertson's Distribution Center is also helping out once again by providing donations of food for the buffet dinner. The buffet was a big hit last year, according to Chairman Carole Wilson, and guests will enjoy dinner on the patio again this year before gaming starts.

The event will feature craps, roulette, blackjack, and videotaped horseraces. Dozens of door prizes will be given away during the course of the evening. The theme for 1991 is western, and guests are encouraged to come in their best Wild West regalia, although costumes are optional.

Committee members are busy selling sign sponsorships, soliciting door prizes, and recruiting volunteer blackjack dealers. Deal blackjack for 2 hours and you'll get in free! Tickets will cost $20.00 if you buy in advance, or $25.00 at the door. Casino Night offers a terrific evening of fun, food and networking. There will also be a no-host bar. Public Hearing September 3

Chamber Supports Downtown Redevelopment Project

The Board of Directors of the Brea Chamber of Commerce has voted to support the proposed agreement between the Brea Redevelopment Agency and the Watt-Craig Joint Venture when the Redevelopment package comes before the City Council on September 3. This project significantly affects our members and it is important for us to understand the reasons for this action.

Downtown Redevelopment has been controversial, and a number of our members have been affected by it. But the Board, after much research and discussion, concluded that the city's substantial investment and debt service - in the area calls for action as soon as possible. The property owned by the Agency in the area is off the tax rolls at present. It is in the city's best interest to get the area re-developed and back into an income-producing mode as soon a possible. Moreover, a revitalized downtown will benefit the entire community - businesses and residences alike -through increased business activity and new residences.

The Watt-Craig Joint Venture has designed a project that reflects the wishes of community-wide Charette participants. We are confident that the Watt-Craig Joint Venture will meet the project goals. Our confidence is based on detailed citizen input at the Charette, the extensive research performed by city staff, and a carefully negotiated development agreement.

Coldwell Banker Commercial Real Estate is the leasing agent for the project, and has commitments from Ralph's Grocery and Payless Drugs for anchor spots in the 22 acre shopping center, contingent upon the City Council's approval of the agreement. If approved, ground breaking could take place as early as December of 1991. The Board is confident that the best interest of the members and the community at large are served by the Watt-Craig proposal.

The hearing will be held in the council chambers, Brea Civic Center, at 7:00 p.m. on September 3.

Improv Leaves 'em Laughing at August Mixer

A big crowd enjoyed the hospitality of the Improv Comedy Club on August 14. There was lots of table-hopping as guests enjoyed a super buffet amid the ambience of the club, located in the Brea Marketplace. An extra attraction was the dance exhibition staged by the Brea Dance Center. Thanks to Christine Boyd and her very talented young performers for first-rate entertainment.

Guests were in for even more surprises, as the Improv management invited everyone to stay for the evening show. The three performers who appeared were outstanding! If you haven't seen the show, do it soon.

Door prize donors were Century 21 Emery-Bud Walker; Brea Dance Center; The Improv; Mary Foley, MJB Realty; Cobblestone, Inc.; Browns Construction Company; La Petite Florist & Gifts; Sumitomo Bank; Crackers; Baskin Robbins Ice Cream; Yogurts Plus; and Landmark Bank. Thanks to all these generous folks for some great prizes!

Join us on September 11, when Conroy's Flowers at Imperial and Poplar hosts the monthly Mixer.

Our hostess, Corinne Sloan of the Improv welcomes members and invites them to stay for the evening show as her guests. Thanks Corinne!

Look out Fred and Ginger. The Brea Dance Center's performers got toes tappin' as they delighted mixer goers with a sampling of their talents.

Fred Browns and his recruits have as much fun handing out door prizes as the winners.

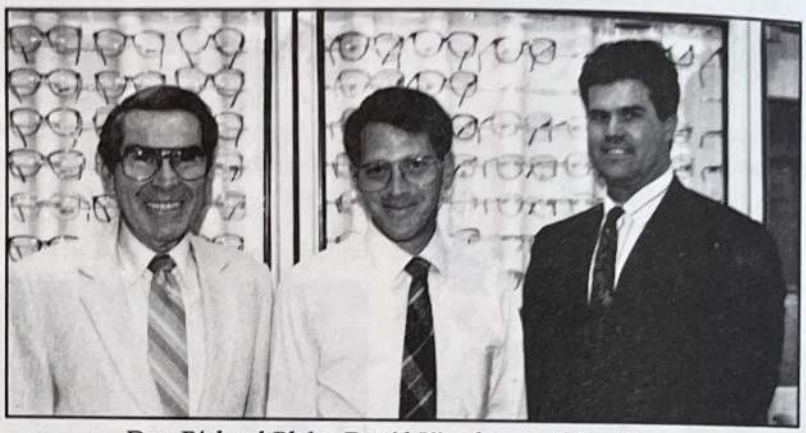
A[illegible]nning Team - Optometrists Offer Old Fashioned Friendliness and Service, Latest in Technology

Brea Optometrist Richard Blake, one of the most popular and respected members of the Brea business community, will soon celebrate his 40th continuous year as a Chamber member, and is still active on several committees. (Those of you who can't seem to make it to even ONE event each year, take note!) Dr. Blake is well-known to several generations of Breans whose families have depended on him for eye care over the years. While he still practices at his S. Brea Blvd. office, Dr. Blake has opted for semi-retirement in recent years and two new colleagues are on staff.

Dr. David Kirschen is a specialist in pediatric eye care. He is a graduate of UCLA, received his optometric training at the University of California, Berkeley, including a Ph.D. in Physiological Optics. He also completed a post-doctoral fellowship at UCB. Dr. Kirschen is on staff at the Jules Stein Eye Institute at UCLA and teaches at the Southern California School of Optometry in Fullerton.

Optometry has come a long way in recent years, according to Dr. Kirschen, especially pediatric optometry. It is now possible to accurately measure the vision capacity of babies as young as one week. Early detection of problems is often the key to minimizing their negative effects. Dr. Kirschen recommends that children be tested at the age of 1 year, again at age 3, and again before starting school.

Dr. Jon Crum, a graduate of the Southern California School of Optometry in Fullerton, is also a full-time member of the staff. He specializes in low-vision problems common among seniors. Dr. Crum suggests that everyone have a regular eye exam at least every two years up until age 35, and once a year thereafter. Many potential problems may not be obvious without a thorough eye exam.



Drs. Richard Blake, David Kirschen, and Jon Crum in their Brea Boulevard office.

Our high-tech society is leading to new problems, and new solutions. VDT users are subject to unique eye problems. The doctors are well-versed in training VDT users to minimize eyestrain and potential problems. One exciting development is disposable contact lenses - YES - disposable! The wearer can use them for one week continuously, or two weeks during the day only. Then they go into the trash can and a new pair is provided. The Brea office has an extensive supply of the disposable lenses in stock. If you're frustrated with the routine of contact lens maintenance, you might want to try this new product.

The Brea Chamber of Commerce salutes Dr. Blake for an outstanding career in Brea, and welcomes his newer colleagues. Their office is located at 428 S. Brea Blvd. and can be reached at 529-8228.

Placentia Linda Hospital Recycles Foam Products

Placentia Linda Hospital recently became the first hospital in the state to use an on-site densifier for recycling approximately one million foam cups, bowls, plates and polystyrene products used each year at the hospital. The centerpiece of the program, which seeks to recycle 6400 pounds annually, is an advance technology densifier that the hospital has leased from Michigan-based Dart Container Corporation, the nation's largest manufacturer of foam cups.

"As a medical institution, Placentia Linda Hospital is concerned about health and the environment and we are proud to be California's first hospital to recycle foam on our premises," said Charles L. Baker, chief executive officer for the hospital. "Through recycling, we're helping to ensure a healthy, safe environment for our future."

Congratulations to Placentia Linda on an outstanding project!

The Personnel Place, Dial Personnel Associates Announce Merger

Rebecca Nelson, Lisa Martin, and Joe Baffa will be happy to assist you.

The Personnel Place, established in Brea in early 1988, has merged with Dial Personnel Associates, according to an announcement made by principals of the firms recently. The company will operate under the Dial name at 1033 E. Imperial Hwy. #E10 in the Brea Village Shopping Center at Randolph and Imperial. Joe Baffa, former Vice President and General Manager of The Personnel Place, will join the local Dial staff as an Account Manager. The merger doubles the size of Dial's Brea branch and combined two local, well-respected employment services.

Dial was the first clerical employment service in Brea and has been a member of the Brea Chamber since 1981. With additional offices in Newport Beach and the corporate headquarters in Whittier, Dial covers all of Orange County, the San Gabriel Valley, and surrounding areas. The offices are linked with a state of the art computer system to ensure that clients and applicants are properly matched. Each branch also has computerized testing, evaluation and training to serve employees and employers.

Joe Baffa, former V.P. of the Personnel Place, expresses his excitement about the recent merger. "Our organizations have always had similar philosophies, clientele, and goals. We've now enhanced our ability to reach and service new clients by utilizing Dial's many resources and presence in the marketplace."

Dial Owners Doug and Jan Lopez are also encouraged about the future. "Doug and I are excited that we've blended the excellent qualities of the Personnel Place with our company. Caring for our clients' needs has been Dial Personnel's driving force for over 34 years . This merger will strengthen this conviction as we meet the demands of today's sophisticated personnel market."

Whether you need temporary or full time employees, or if you are looking for employment, Dial Personnel Associates will continue to service your needs. For more information about the full range of employment services, call the Brea location at (714) 671-1726.

Sylvan Learning Center Offers Kids the Extra Advantage in School

A love of children and 20 years of teaching experience makes Linda Lewis well qualified to operate Sylvan Learning Center, located at 1033 E. Imperial Hwy. #E9. The center works with children of all ages to enhance basic classroom skills. With education budgets shrinking all the time, schools have fewer dollars to devote to classroom aides; with more two-income families, there are fewer volunteers available to work with students one-on-one. Sylvan Learning Center can help fill the gap. Students at Sylvan receive individual attention during their twice-weekly sessions. All Sylvan teachers are credentialed educators, and the emphasis is on the basics, especially reading since it is the foundation of all learning, according to Lewis.

Many of the students who attend Sylvan just need a little extra help and attention. Some suffer from dyslexia or attention span problems. Some may have gotten behind their grade level during an illness or family move. In any case, Lewis and her faculty will conduct testing and design a study program appropriate to the child's skill level.

Improved grades may be the immediate payback, but Lewis says that by far the biggest reward for her is seeing her students' self-esteem grow as they master skills and no longer feel afraid in the classroom. "Kids who used to feel self-conscious at school because of their poor academic skills almost seem to become new people once they get up to speed," she says. "Instead of feeling scared or threatened, they feel safe and comfortable. Many parents tell me they can't believe all the wonderful changes in their children once their problems with basic skills have been addressed."

A graduate of UCLA, Lewis taught elementary school in California and Ohio, and served as a Master Teacher during her career. Operating Sylvan allows her to pursue her love of teaching as well as her entrepreneurial bent. She is active on the Brea Chamber's Education Task Force and sees centers such as Sylvan as a compliment to public education, not a competitor. "We can offer personal time and attention that just isn't possible in the classroom," she says. For more information, call Linda Lewis at 255-1155.

Chamber Member Goes to the Dogs - - - and Cats and Snakes

Pat Oswald turned her love of animals into a lucrative business.

So you think you have some tough clients? Consider the plight of Pat Oswald, owner of Brea-based Pets-R-Love, who frequently finds herself taking charge of snakes, lizards, birds, rodents, rabbits and turtles, as well as cats, dogs and other pets. Pets-R-Love is a drop-in pet sitting service, and business is booming these days. "It is a very traumatic experience for some pets to be boarded while their owners are away," says Oswald. "Our service allows them to stay at home in their familiar surroundings."

Pets-R-Love employees are carefully screened and all are bonded. They do much more than stop by once or twice a day to feed the animals in their care, too. All are animal lovers who spend time with their charges, playing with them, petting them, or just holding them. Pets-R-Love can also provide complete house-sitting services for those who wish to keep someone on the premises while they are gone. Pets-R-Love employees are non-smokers and provide their own food while staying in your home.

Oswald, a senior flight attendant for American Airlines for many years, saw a need for her service 5 years ago and has seen the business grow by leaps and bounds since then. She provides drop-in service in the North Orange County area, and live-in sitters for the entire county. Pets-R-Love is a member of the Pet Sitters Association of Southern California. Call Pat at 671-1390 for more information about Pets-R-Love.

'California Unemployment Insurance Handbook' Hot Off the Press!

Stewart M. Lerner, founder and CEO of Lerner and Associates, a Brea consulting firm, announces the publication of his most recent book, a comprehensive guide to dealing with California's UI system. The book is published by Parker and Son in Carlsbad, and is co-authored by Lee Paterson, a prominent local employment law attorney.

Lerner worked for the state's Employment Development Department for 30 years, spending most of his career in the management and administration of the UI program. During the past 3 years he has operated his own consulting firm which specializes in assisting human resources personnel and small business owners in dealing with personnel matters. In addition to consulting, Lerner presents seminars and workshops throughout the state.

The California Unemployment Insurance Handbook contains up-to-date information in such crucial areas of employment as misconduct charges, voluntary quits, base period claims, and winning appeal strategies. Appendices provide training in preparing a "statement of the case" and give clear examples of UI forms and time lines. A special chapter on "Intoxication and Use of Intoxicants" is particularly relevant to issues employers commonly face today.

Further information about the book can be obtained from Parker and Sons Publications, Inc., P.O. Box 9040, Carlsbad, CA 92018-9983, or call (800) 452-9873.

The real art of conversation is not only to say the right thing at the right place but to leave unsaid the wrong thing at the tempting moment.

"Harvey, the Summer Funtime Dude" Leads BECU Promotion

Beckman Employees Credit Union has introduced a second cartoon character after last year's "Beckman" super hero became so popular that customers purchased over 500 t-shirts bearing his likeness. "Harvey, the Summer Funtime Dude" is promoting several BECU summer specials, including boat and RV loans, vacation loans, and special Summer Convenience Combos (Visa and ATM cards.) While Harvey hasn't inspired his own t-shirt yet, Marketing Director Beverly Taylor is pleased that the promotions are so popular. "It's that kind of instant feedback that tells us we're doing our promotions right," she says. Bev reminds you that all Chamber members are eligible for credit union membership. For information, or to take advantage of BECU's special summer deals, call Bev at 526-BECU, extension 401.

Board Election Ballots Coming

Chamber members will receive official ballots for electing new members to the Board of Directors this month. Directors are elected for 3 year terms, and candidates will be listed on the ballot in random order with a brief summary of their Chamber and civic involvement. There are 12 candidates running for 9 seats. The Chamber bylaws dictate that there are to be at least 3 more candidates than open seats.

Incumbents running for reelection include Carole Wilson, Todd Beckley, Stu Lerner, Cathryn Martin, Darwin Manuel and Gene Mills. New candidates include Carl Clausen, Wayne Maris, Jim Charter, Lauren Scott, Tom Easterday and Bud Walker. The Chamber is YOURS - be sure to vote and have a say in the way your organization is run.

Chamber Staff Members Continue Education

Three Chamber staff members recently attended continuing education classes or conferences dealing with Chamber management. Executive Director Sherry Norman completed her final year of Institutes for Organization Management at the University of Delaware. Institute is a 6-year progressive program that addresses all facets of nonprofit and Chamber management. Assistant Director Mary Albrecht completed her third year of the program in July at Stanford University. Marketing Director Annetta Scott recently attended the National Association of Membership Directors conference in New Orleans. All of these staff members brought back lots of ideas for new programs and projects that will serve you better.

Need Help With a Problem?

The Chamber offers a Peer Counseling service for members. If you have a problem that you need help with, call the office at 529-4938 and the staff will match you with an expert in the field for up to one hour of free counseling. If you would like to be a peer counselor, call the office and tell us about your field of expertise. The Peer Counseling Program is a great way to help fellow members and expand your own business contacts.

There is no substitute for interest. Things a leader has interest in tend to get done first and on time. If the manager isn't interested, they may get done later — or pehaps not at all.

Gala Grand Openings On Tap

Chamber members are cordially invited to attend grand opening ceremonies for 3 businesses.

BREA VETERANS CLUB - SEPTEMBER 13, 4:00 P.M.

Chamber bartender Leo Mitchell, who also manages the Brea Veterans Club, wants everyone to turn out for ribbon cutting ceremonies for the Vets' new building at 735 S. Brea Blvd. Formerly located in the old downtown area, the club now occupies spacious new quarters on the Blvd. just south of Fir St. and across from the 770 building. The club now offers lunch service for members and guests, and has an attractive banquet room that can be reserved for meetings, parties, and wedding receptions. The ribbon cutting will take place at 4 p.m. on Friday, September 13, and Leo invites everyone to come and have a great time. Those who have attended Vets Club parties in the past know that no one does it like Leo! Come join us!

SUMITOMO BANK - SEPTEMBER 20, 5:30 P.M.

Vice President and Branch Manager Victor Van cordially invites members to attend ribbon cutting ceremonies and a grand opening party for the new bank, located in the Brea Marketplace at 775 E. Birch St. Victor isn't telling all the details just yet, but the groundbreaking gala some months ago featured a very interesting Shinto ceremony, and the ribbon cutting will probably also be very unusual. The ceremony will be followed by a reception featuring American, Chinese and Japanese cuisine. Tours of the new facility will be available, along with lots of special deals for new clients, including 1 year free checking, one year no-fee Visa cards, and lots of prizes. First prize will be a one week trip to Hawaii for 2 people. Other prizes include Brea Mall gift certificates, Walkman radios, and Cross Pen and Pencil sets.

Sumitomo is very community-oriented and will also be offering a public safety program "Kinder Vision" for children during their grand opening festivities. A child-safety program, including a videotape of your child, instructional literature and fingerprinting will be offered on a date yet to be announced.

"Stormin' Norman" Commends Designs by Jurgen

When Jurgen Maerz, owner of Designs by Jurgen, sent Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf a 14-karat gold eagle after the completion of Operation Desert Storm, he didn't expect a personal reply. But "Stormin' Norman" sent a warm and appreciative letter of thanks to the Brea jewelry designer, commending him on both his patriotism and his outstanding craftsmanship. "You are quite a talented artist," the general wrote, "and I can assure you that I will wear your tie tack as a momento of Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm."

Maerz was prompted to send the eagle (an original design) as a token of his appreciation for the troops who served in the campaign. A native of Germany, Jurgen was a young Boy Scout when he saw the Berlin Wall being erected. He is firmly convinced that oppression must be stopped immediately wherever it raises its head. An American citizen now, Jurgen is proud of America's willingness to get involved.

Jurgen is a goldsmith who specializes in custom jewelry and works with many unusual gems and gemstones. Siegfried and Roy, the Las Vegas entertainment team, are regular customers, as are many other celebrities. In addition to creating new pieces for clients, he also reworks old jewelry, turning dated or unpopular pieces into new items that are more suitable to the owner's taste. Several ready-to-purchase originals are on display in his beautiful showroom. Located on S. Brea Blvd. for a number of years, Jurgen recently relocated to the Gaslight Square complex at 235 E. Imperial Hwy., Suite C. He can be reached at 529-2799. Remember - Christmas is coming. If you want to order a special custom piece for a loved one, see Jurgen soon!

STRAIGHT TALK

It's never too soon to talk about straightening your child's teeth.

Early childhood orthodontic consultation —even before preschool—is best. Facial bones are easier to shape and serious problems eliminated before damaging a child's self-image.

What's more, because success depends on a trusting relationship between the young patient and orthodontist, introducing your child to early treatment could be priceless.

So, when your dentist recommends consulting an orthodontist, don't delay. In fact, we invite you to call us today for some straight answers. Because it might be later than you think.

CITY OF BREA

Brea consists of 10 square miles surrounded by gentle rolling hills. The snow-capped mountains to the north in the wintertime make Brea picture-postcard beautiful. It is situated in the northeastern corner of Orange County in Southern California, and has an altitude of 375 feet above sea level, the highest incorporated city in the county which affords its residents security from flood danger.

With the opening of the Orange Freeway in 1972, Breans became easily accessible to the high and low desert, beaches, mountains, and countless entertainment facilities such as Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, San Diego Zoo, Sea World and Movieland Wax Museum to name a few.

The Civic/Cultural Center was completed recently. The City's Art in Public Places Program excels with 16 pieces of art work now in existence, and enough more approved for placement, that the Community's entire program of Art in Public Places will exceed 40 pieces of public sculpture during the next 12 to 24 month period. This effort has been recognized internationally, and numerous other areas are communicating with us to secure information on how this has been accomplished in a relatively small, suburban community.

Major public improvements are continuing with current street efforts in the areas of Lambert, Puente, Imperial and Elm Streets being high on the list. Central City improvements will continue and plans to improve and add to the City Service Center on Berry Street are underway.

Major development work in the industrial and commercial areas continue to be in progress, with housing efforts to start scaling down, reflecting the general trend that has been underway for the last two or three years. Efforts to aid work on area-wide employment and traffic are major focal points.

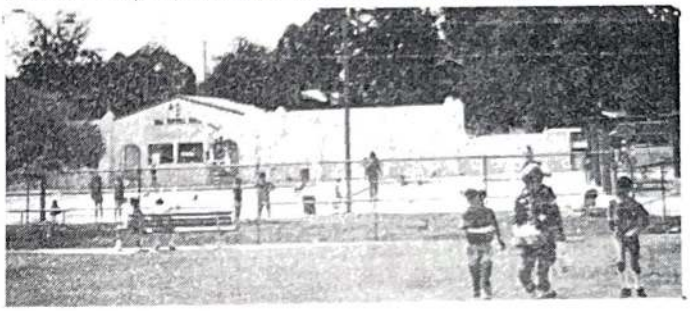
Master plan review for Carbon Canyon is a major item of interest and concern for the community, with sewers, land use, land-fill and expansion, traffic and other items being high on the agenda of evaluation.

Continued efforts will be made to refine, modify, and improve citizen involvement during the year to make sure that lines of communication between the citizens and their government remain open and that opportunities exist for allowing the city to move forward with good citizen-understanding of both problems and participation in their proposed solutions.

Today, Brea is in another kind of "boom" but it's not oil. It is industrial, commercial, retail, and residential expansion. Population has grown from 3,208 in 1950 to 25,000 in 1978, and expects to continue its growth.

In the spring of 1977, the opening of the 21 acre Brea Plaza shopping center was a start of things to come. A 99 acre regional shopping complex called the Brea Mall opened its doors in the fall of 1977. Built on two levels and climate-controlled, parking areas are easily accessible. Inside one will find landscaping, sculptures, seating clusters and carpeting to make shopping, eating, or watching ice skating in an indoor cafe-like atmosphere a pleasure.

Adjacent to he Brea Mall is the city's $14 million new four acre cultural center. The governmental structure will provide office space for city operations, school district functions, a major library, little theatre and TV studio, art gallery, museum and community meeting rooms. Brea has six other mini-shopping centers scattered throughout the city with more in the planning stages.



Brea City Plunge

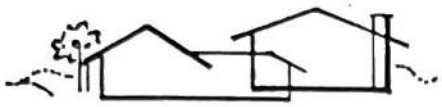
The original part of downtown, "Good Old Brea" is being kept alive by restoring and upgrading original buildings to protect our historical heritage. The town of Olinda was declared a state historical landmark in January 1978.

Among all this activity, Brea still remains unique in that it still projects a "small town" atmosphere. The cooperation of merchants, residents, business, city manager and city council working hand-in-hand to keep the image of Brea has developed and been made possible through the implementation of a master plan.

Invitingly pedestrian oriented, the Good Old Brea Commercial Center developed around the corners of Ash Street and Brea Boulevard in the early teens. Expansion continued in a southward trend until the 1930s when the commercial center occupied a two and one-half block stretch of Brea Boulevard. A small town atmosphere is evoked from the area because the buildings are close to the street and many are intact. Ranging in height, the buildings are a variety of styles indicative of the different periods of development.

105-09 East Ash WEst Building

One of the early Craftsmanship-False front commercial structures, this is one of Brea's oldest commercial structures. In the past, the upper story consisted of rented rooms while stores occupied the lower floors. The building originally faced on Brea Boulevard but was turned on the lot.



BREA:
The Well-Rounded City
by
Jeannette McCormack

In the northeastern corner of Orange County, nestled at the very mouth of Brea Canyon is the bustling community of Brea. This busy little city which sprang from the California oil boom in the early 1900s is quickly growing into an important industrial center.

The name Brea is a Spanish word meaning "tar," or "asphalt" and there exists the whole reason for the city's being. In the early days of California, settlers from the Pomona and Santa Ana Valleys came to Brea Canyon to cut chunks of the oil-soaked earth from the canyon walls for use as fuel in heating their homes and as waterproofing for their roofs.

During the 1890s oil men attempted to develop this "black gold." The Puente Hills area was the location chosen for the first of these oil fields in the northern boundaries of Brea. Early development was slow due to the inadequacies of drilling equipment of the era.

Abel Stearns, a native of Massachusetts, had acquired a fortune in land at this time. Being faced with bankruptcy he was forced to sell his property at $1.50 per acre. Portions of this land was bought by the Stearns Ranch Company.

The Union Oil Company of California purchased approximately 1,200 acres from the Stearns Ranch Company in 1894 and began their oil development in 1895. Wells were drilled and oil was produced. The Stearns property increased in oil and gas production. Following Union's great success, other oil companies began purchasing land in the area. Among them: Brea Canyon Oil, Standard Oil, Western Oil, Shell Oil, Columbia Oil Production Company, E.L. Doheny and the Birch Oil Company.

High wages augmented the growth of the community and workers moved in with their families. Many even literally moved houses, foundation and all into the area.

The Ontario Investment Company filed a subdivision map for a town to be named Randolph in 1908. It would be located just south of the mouth of Brea Canyon on the relatively flat mesa. This area was part of the Randolph School District, which at this time consisted of a two-story frame school building on the corner of what is now North Brea Boulevard and West Deodara.

On Jan. 19, 1911, a new map was filed for the same subdivision. This one requested that the name be changed from Randolph to Brea. Streets running north and south were named Madronna, Walnut, Pomona (now called Brea Boulevard), Orange and Flower. Streets running east and west were named La Habra Street (now called Ash Street), Fifth Street (now Birch Street), and Sixth Street (later changed to Cedar Street...and now named Imperial Highway).

Building of the town itself began in early 1911. Homes and small industries sprang up to serve the oil fields. Under the governing County Board of Supervisors, Brea became a booming community. Brea's population increased steadily as drilling in nearby Olinda declined. Merchants who had heretofore supported the town of Olinda in Carbon Canyon moved their businesses to Brea, setting up stores, hotels, barber shops and markets catering to the demands of the oil field workers.

In 1915, the district approved a $140,000 bond issue for a new school. The School Board acquired a parcel of land from Union Oil Company on the northeast corner of Deodara (Lambert) and Pomona (Brea Boulevard). The school was opened in 1916, with 11 teachers for the eight grades. From these humble beginnings, the Brea Junior High School grew. It is still in use today.

Brea was incorporated on Feb. 23, 1917, with a population of 732. City officials were elected and council members were selected. Among these appointments were Jay C. Sexton as Mayor, and Councilmen M.J. McCarty, P.C. Huddleston, Isaac Craig and R.H. Mitchell. Charles C. Kinsler was City Clerk and Leon A. Sayles, City Treasurer. In May 1917 M.J. McCarty resigned and the Board of Trustees elected Frank J. Schweitzer, Sr. to fill the unexpired term. With subsequent re-elections, Mr. Schweitzer served 21 years on the City Council. Two upper-floor rooms of the Sewell Building (adjacent to the present Frame Place) were utilized as council chamber and city clerk's offices until the city hall was built in 1929.

Mr. Ted Craig, one-time Mayor, attributes much of Brea's success and growth to the foresight and planning excellence of the City Council. The Council encouraged the early incorporation of much additional land which even today allows room for future growth of the city.

By 1921, with the continued prosperity of the oil companies, Brea had grown into a sizable community. There were soon two schools, three churches and a power plant that furnished Brea with a street lighting system. Then came the purchase of a water reservoir with equipment and water shares from the Chaffey interest.

The Brea Canyon Road leading to Pomona was begun and a branch of the Orange County Free Library was opened. With a $40,000 bond issue approved, a tank and water tower was erected at the reservoir site and a water main, meters and fire hydrants were installed.

In describing early Brea, Warren Griffith, a long-time resident recalls his early days working for Union Oil. They sent him to Brea to learn about the oil trade. He was called a "gauger," which according to Mr. Griffith, was an unflattering term. It described someone who "wasn't husky enough to work on the pipeline gang or wasn't a good enough housekeeper to work in the pipeline bunk station."

Today he feels there are differences in attitudes in people. "The people then were more self-sufficient. They grew their own crops, made their own clothes, and if you had something wrong with your car, chances are that your neighbor across the street would come over and ask if he could help. I guess they must have had more time then, their lives were less cluttered. Today we don't even have enough time for ourselves, much less someone else."

In March 1922, the Red Lantern Theater first opened its doors. The gala opening night featured music by the Brea Municipal Band before the presentation film "A Game Chicken" starring Bebe Daniels. Lyle Yeats, president of the Brea Investment Company, owners of the theater, presented Breans with their first look at the Oriental decor and the melodious sound of the Robert Morgan pipe organ.

On Aug. 10, 1922, the Brea Lions Club was chartered. During this year three tracts of land were opened to encourage home building, while a $150,000 bond issue provided curb-to-curb pavement for Pomona Avenue (Brea Boulevard). Curbs and hard surfacing for the streets on both sides of the main boulevard were poured. At last Brea was growing from a rural community into an established town.

In 1947, the largest in diameter gas lines were completed through Brea on Deodara (Lambert), bringing natural gas from New Mexico and Arizona to the Los Angeles Metropolitan area. Colorado River water flowed for the first time into Brea water mains from the lines of the Metropolitan Water District.

With the annexation of Carbon Canyon in 1960, Brea became one of the largest cities in land area in Orange County. The '50s and '60s saw an influx of housing development. Subdivisions totaling over nine square miles grew within the city limits.

In 1972, the Orange Freeway was completed. Traffic flowed between Orange County, the Pomona Valley and the Los Angeles Basin.

Many of Brea's early industries still exist today. Brea Tool Works, begun in 1922, was later sold to W.D. Shaffer and became Shaffer Tool Works. Chicksan Company (now a division of FMC), foundedin 1903 as a mining company in Korea, moved to Brea in 1928 and began producing oil related equipment, including the famous swivel joint.

Although there are still producing wells in Brea, there is no longer any actual drilling. The gigantic reservoirs that once stored thousands of gallons of oil now serve as water towers.

Breans take great pride in the fact that they are a community that encourages the active participation of civic groups and individual citizenss.

"Brea ia a well-rounded community," contends Frank Schweitzer, Jr., of the Brea Historical Society, who describes himself as a "Brea Boy.." Not unlike his father before him, he has been active in many different phases of Brea's growth, including a mayorship, City Council and community enrichment projects. The excellent balance between industrial, commercial and residential development, he feels, aids future growth potential.

The community that began as an oil town has grown into an important industrial center, offering not only opportunity and security, but also a family-oriented type of community that is worthy of its people. Brea is a city large enough to be beneficial to outlying communities as a shopping and distribution center and yet still small-town enough to allow its citizens individuality, seasoned with a close knit friendliness.

Chamber, city make Brea business's friend

Leonard Ortiz/The Orange County Register

By Jeff Rowe
The Orange County Register
From Brea

It's the little city that does.

Sometimes lost in the seamless sprawl where Orange, Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Riverside counties come together, Brea is forging an identity as perhaps Orange County's most accommodating business address. Other towns talk about being a pal to business, but Brea gives it a hug.

Consider, for example, the case of the Texaco station snack bar.

Shortly after Said (pronounced Sy-eed) Abuqartoumy leased the station on Imperial Highway 16 months ago, he presented plans to modify the building to comply with new laws requiring improved access for disabled people. Abuqartoumy, who arrived in the United States from Jordan with $800 in 1979, had already spent $20,000 landscaping the station, which pleased neighboring businesses and helped lure customers.

But he ran into a regulatory thicket with his plans, which also included a modest expansion of the snack bar. Trouble was, the previous lessee hadn't obtained permission for a snack bar of any size.

But Abuqartoumy didn't become another bureaucratic casualty. Sherry Norman, executive director of the Brea Chamber of Commerce, quickly met with him and city authorities, and although a few details remain to be resolved, Abuqartoumy's $150,000 renovation and snack-bar expansion look to be on course.

"Had (the chamber) not helped me, I would be on the street," Abuqartoumy said.

The effort is typical of Brea's can-do attitude toward retaining its business base.

"They are certainly effective at it," said Phil Miller, district representative for Assemblyman Ross Johnson, R-Fullerton, whose district covers much of the north county. "Other cities work at it but none seem able to get the same rate of return."

Moreover, Brea's regional outlook, good schools and pleasant atmosphere attract and hold companies, said Sterling Fox, field representative for state Sen. Frank Hill, R-Whittier, whose district includes much of the south and central county. "They (Brea) always have taken the large view of things."

These days, Brea's business-retention program is largely in the hands of Bill Murray, president of the Chamber of Commerce and a roving ambassador, negotiator and problem-solver for businesses. He is vice president and manager of the Landmark Bank branch in Brea.

Over the years, Brea has encouraged commercial development to a degree perhaps unmatched elsewhere in the county. Although Brea has only about 33,000 residents, its daytime population is nearly triple that as workers and shoppers stream in from surrounding areas.

But in becoming a friendly place for business, Brea has made some enemies.

Last month, an Orange County Superior Court judge ruled that the city violated government codes when it moved hundreds of displaced households and businesses as part of its $110 million redevelopment plan. Work has been halted until a relocation plan for those businesses and residences is approved.

Murray acknowledges that mistakes have been made but wants to see the redevelopment work completed.

Not content for the chamber to be a dispenser of maps and organizer of socials, Murray, other chamber officials and city authorities visited about 20 of Brea's largest employers from April to June, startling some when they asked, "How are things and how can we help?"

The approach has worked.

Although it had been a fixture in Brea for 40 years, Kirkhill Rubber was tempted by low costs in states such as Arizona and New Mexico. Departure of the maker of industrial rubber parts could have meant a loss of 700 jobs.

But Ray Larson from the chamber and Ret Wixted, the city's director of community services, visited the company, assuring Vice President Larry Gadaire that the city and chamber would do all they could to encourage regulatory agencies to reduce the maze of restrictions.

Kirkhill no longer ponders moving. "This is where we want to stay," Gadaire said. "Brea is a good place to do business."

The city's efforts to retain companies illustrate that although underlying business concerns such as workers' compensation and myriad regulations are state issues, responsive city officials can make a difference.

Lacking the cache of Newport Beach or the crossroads location of Santa Ana, Brea nonetheless has steadily expanded its business base in recent years. The city currently counts 2,500 business licenses, up from 1,750 in 1987. Most are small enterprises, but large employers include a research unit of Unocal Corp., Sundstrand Aviation, Mercury Insurance Group and Lucas Western Electro Systems.

The experiences of Louis and Co. illustrate how small actions by city officials can make a difference.

When the distributor of cabinet hardware and woodworking supplies presented plans for its new office and warehouse, city engineers volunteered to meet with the architect and builder to help make sure the building was seismically safe.

"Not one screw fell off the shelf in the last earthquake," said Ed McGraw, the company's controller.

And when McGraw was having trouble getting a customer who had written several bad checks to return calls, he took the checks to Sgt. Thomas Flenniken, a detective with the Brea Police Department.

"Flenniken called, and funny, the guy came right up with the money," McGraw recalled.

Another time, Louis and Co. suspected that an employee was stealing inventory. A police officer agreed to pose as a buyer and the employee was promptly arrested.

In another instance, the company wondered what to do with an expected overflow of cars for a trade show it scheduled. A few telephone calls and the city issued special parking waivers.

Louis and Co. also has operations in Dallas, Phoenix and San Diego, but McGraw says officials from those cities have never contacted the company.

As responsive as Brea has been to business, the problems of high costs and stringent environmental regulations remain unresolved. City and chamber officials realize that being friendly may not be enough.

"We would like to to be able to say we closed deals, but until the underlying problems are resolved, we may have our most important sales presentations ahead of us," Murray said.

Chamber's goals

To keep business in the city, Brea's Chamber of Commerce has established several goals:

- Keep its redevelopment program moving.
- Reach out and involve companies in problem solving.
- Foster greater cooperation in tackling regional and state concerns.

CITY COUNCIL REPORT

Council OKs park buyout

The city's oldest mobile home park will be under new management.

The Brea Redevelopment Agency will financially assist the Caritas Corporation, a non-profit housing group, in buying Rancho Park Brea on Central Avenue.

The agreement, approved by City Council on Sept. 3, calls for the agency to help Caritas secure tax-free bonds to purchase the land and 100-space development from private owners for an estimated $5.4 million. It also allows the agency to loan the Caritas Corporation about $390,000 for capital improvements to the 36-year-old park.

The contract complies with the 1995 city/agency mobile home policy that requires the Brea Redevelopment Agency to assist non-profit housing corporations intent on improving residents' quality of life.

Council earmarked about $100,000 for negelected maintenance, such as overgrown palm trees, cracked streets, inferior underground plumbing and escalating space rent costs. Loan dollars would also put a $600 cap on space rent costs.

In return for the low investment — about $7,000-$11,000 per unit, the city receives a groomed mobile home park exterior and 50 affordable housing units that comply with state housing mandates.

Here are other results of the Brea City Council meeting:

BUS SHELTERS

▶ Approve contract with Eller Media Company to construct and maintain 10 new bus shelters and benches throughout the city. The company also will maintain two existing structures on Central Avenue. Shelter design will complement Brea's Art in Public Places program. The city will receive about $13,392 a year from shelter advertising revenue. Approved. Mayor Burnie Dunlap, Yes; Glenn Parker, Yes; Lynn Daucher, Yes; Bev Perry, Yes; Kathy Wiser, Yes.

AMBULANCE SUPPLIES

▶ Approve agreement calling for Emergency Ambulance Service to reimburse Brea more than $21,000 a year for expendible medical supplies used during rides to St. Jude Hospital. Supply costs from the 1,200 patients transported each year will be billed directly to users. Brea will be reimbursed for initial supply costs. Approved 5-0.

REDEVELOPMENT AGENCY LOAN

▶ Approve $148,000 agency loan for rehabilitation of Imperial Terrace Apartments on Imperial Highway. Money will go toward property improvements at the 37-unit complex to prevent future overcrowding and maintenance neglect. The loan is part of the recently approved Rental Rehabilitation and Assistance Program. Approved 5-0.

STORM DRAIN

▶ Authorize city staff to receive bids on a storm drain on Fir Street from the Brea Canyon Channel to about 260 feet east of Mulberry Avenue. The drain will be designed to divert run-off water from reaching the Juniper Street neighborhood by rerouting excess flow through the Brea Golf Course. Juniper Street residents have experienced flooding situations in the past. Approved 5-0.

City Council proclaims Family Week

"The humblest home in which love prevails in a united family is of greater value to humanity than any other riches . . ."
— author unknown

By Danielle Benson
Brea Progress

In the late 1980s, pop singer Whitney Houston captured the hearts of America with her No. 1 single, "Greatest Love of All." The song touted children as the future and admonished adults to teach them well.

The City Council recently embaced this ideal, proclaming Nov. 23-30 as National Family Week and joining Gov. Pete Wilson and President Clinton in their state and national proclamations.

National Family Week, which encompasses the one family-oriented holiday separate from religion in the United States — Thanksgiving — began 25 years ago as a way of promoting family unity, individual communication and intrapersonal relations.

National Family Week is nothing new in town. Dunlap recognized several families who regularly revel in the spirit of unity.

"I invite our citizens to encourage family togetherness," Dunlap said. "Not only during Family Week, but throughout the year."

Sign, sign everywhere a sign

The campaign is in full swing for the City Council election. School board contenders aren't getting into the groove just yet, but many said they plan to campaign later.

The Chamber of Commerce Political Action Committee (PAC) — an independent subdivision at arm's length from the business organization — will meet Sept. 12 to interview both school board and City Council candidates. PAC will endorse candidates it feels will be open-minded to the business community and its concerns.

Around town, however, the race is on to win a council seat. Incumbent Bev Perry's re-election signs sprung up two weeks ago on several public right-of-ways. Some residents, however, aren't pleased with Perry's enthusiasm.

John Ewald complained at the Sept. 3 City Council meeting about having to look at these re-elction signs for four months. Ewald said political campaign signs should adhere to the 30-day time limit just as business signs and banners do. He also suggested a sign clean-up fund using candidate money.

City Attorney Jim Markman responded that political signs are the primary form of speech in an election campaign and the city can't regulate signs any more than other forms of speech. Markman likened the situation to the longevity of "For Sale" signs on private homes.

Perry said her signs went up after the filing period closed and campaign season officially started. She added that she checked placement herself to make sure no area was over-saturated.

Another City Council candidate, Marty Simonoff, also has a few signs up — most notably at the corner of Imperial Highway and Brea Boulevard in the Gateway Spa. Simonoff will kick-off his campaign with a fund-raiser Sept. 18 at the Brea Veterans Club on Brea Boulevard at 5:30 p.m. The Brea Firefighters Association recently endorsed Simonoff.

Pat Davis, another council candidate, put his signs up along Birch Street at the golf course and near the Civic and Cultural Center last week.

Candidates bristling over signs of the times

THIS WEEK

Campaign season is in full swing and candidates are out on every corner — or at least their signs are.

Candidate Steven Vargas spoke during the Sept. 17 City Council meeting, saying he feels political candidates should adhere to local business restrictions for posting time limits.

Businesses can post a sign for 30 days twice a year. Vargas said he intends to comply with these standards and put up his signs Oct. 5. He called the smattering of other candidates' colorful signs around the city a serious "blight."

The City Attorney resonded that political speech is a highly protected form of communication under the United States Constitution and signs are included. Cities cannot regulate political signs any more than any other form of free speech, he said.

Nancy Wright recently noted that she too will post signs after Oct. 5, saying she didn't want to look at them in her own front yard for more than a month.

Another aspect of most campaigns — debates — also is simmering. The Brea Historical Society is sponsoring "Meet the Candidates" night Sept. 30 at the First Baptist Church, 408 S. Flower Ave. at 7 p.m. Both City Council and school board candidates are invited. Council candidates will have five minutes to deliver a statement follwed by questions from the audience asked by moderator Jane O'Brien, president of the Historical Society.

1990 Annual Report

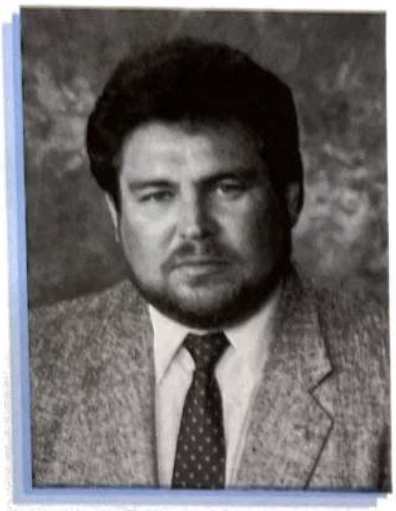
OUR FUTURE IS HERE



President's Message

1990 has been a very exciting year for the Brea Chamber of Commerce. We have seen lots of changes. There has been a keen interest in Strategic Planning, especially after our successful Reaccreditation effort earlier in the year. For the first time in many years, committees have evaluated the entire organization, including the bylaws, policy and procedure manuals, and even the mission statement. The most extensive member survey ever was undertaken, and the Chamber leadership has been making changes in the program in response to the input received from the membership.

The result of all this activity is going to be even better service to our membership. Service can translate to mean many different things, but the ultimate goal for the Chamber is to help our members improve their profitability. We are already doing this in a variety of ways - marketing opportunities, exposure, networking, business referrals, not to mention maintaining a proactive stance on business-oriented legislation at all levels of government.

In the years ahead, we hope to provide even more opportunities and services for members of the Brea Chamber of Commerce. Several new programs will be launched in 1991, such as the Business-to-Business Counseling program and the Networkers group. There will be an ongoing campaign to communicate with members and find out what the Chamber could or should be doing that it is not already doing. There will be an ongoing commitment to recruiting new committee members and developing new Chamber leadership.

Please take the time to review the summary of 1990 activities included in the following pages. I think you'll be surprised at how much we accomplished. There is also a brief overview of goals and objectives for each area of the program of work for 1991, and it promises to be another exciting, dynamic year.

It has been my pleasure to serve as president of the Chamber during 1990. Best wishes to the new officers and directors for an outstanding 1991.

George Peniche
1990 President

Mission Statement of the Brea Chamber of Commerce

The Brea Chamber of Commerce is the representative of the business community in the City of Brea and in North Orange County. Our mission is to enhance the business climate by providing leadership, opportunities, and representation to our membership and to the business community.

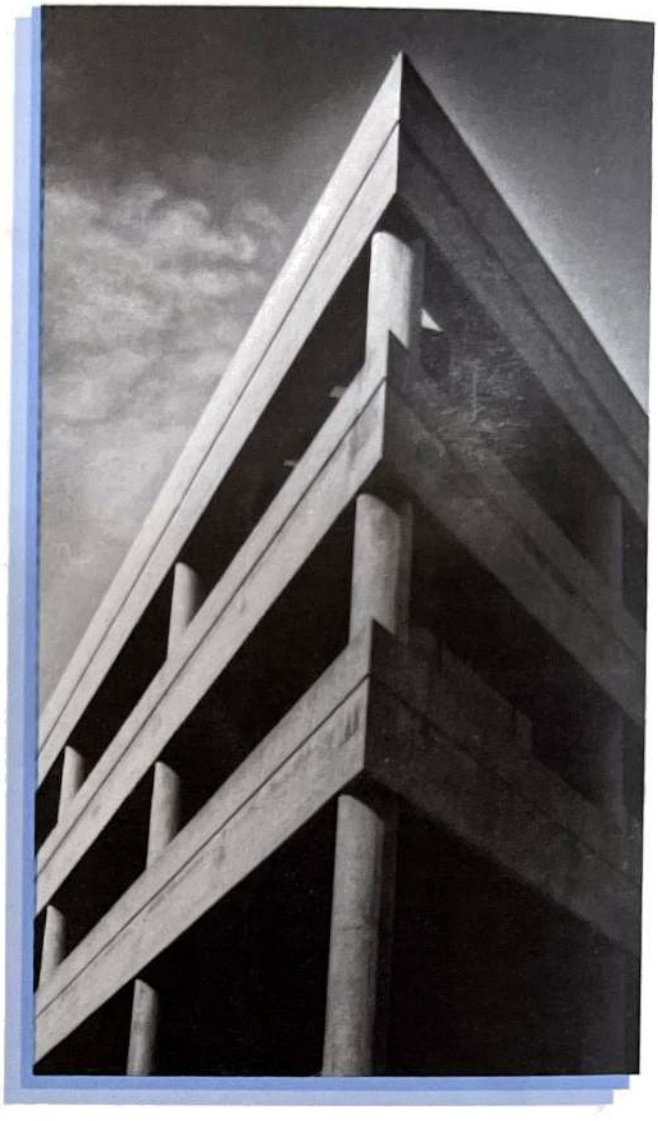
About the Brea Chamber of Commerce

The Brea Chamber of Commerce has been in existence in one form or another since about 1915, but it was formally incorporated in the state of California in 1945. During its existence, the Chamber has played an important part in the economic development and well-being of the city and its environs.

The community of Brea has evolved over the years into an important retail, commercial, and industrial center. The changing nature of the business community has made it imperative that the Chamber change and grow with it. While Brea's retail sales are the envy of many surrounding communities, the Chamber works hard to support the needs of the industrial and service sectors as well. The emphasis in the 1990's will be on legislative action, marketing aids, and counseling for businesses. The Chamber will continue to be a vital communication link between the business community and the many government agencies and publics that affect it. Growth management, environmental issues, increasing rules and regulations, and transportation will continue to have a major impact on the business community.

A full-time professional staff of five serves the chamber membership. Members are encouraged to call the office at any time to voice concerns or complaints, to ask for updates on legislation, or to offer suggestions for future projects. The staff will also be happy to make business referrals or offer advice on business problems.

The lifeblood of the Chamber lies with its committee structure. Committees meet to discuss a variety of issues and make recommendations for action to the Board of Directors. Committees are comprised of a broad cross-section of the membership. All Chamber members in good standing are invited to serve on as many committees as they wish. The following pages will offer some insight into the duties and responsibilities of various committees, what they accomplished in 1990, and what they hope to accomplish in 1991. We hope you will choose to get actively involved in your organization by joining a committee and attending networking and social events.



The Chamber offices are located on the Plaza Level of the Brea Civic Center.

Chamber committees are the "action arm" of the organization.

Committee Highlights

Legislative Committee

Bill Robb, Brea Imperial Graphics
Chairman 1990-1991

A Candidates Forum was one service sponsored by the Legislative Committee in 1990.

This committee is charged with studying legislation and making recommendations to the Board of Directors on all bills, propositions, ordinances, resolutions, etc. that affect the business community at the state and federal levels. 1990 saw many successes, as the committee worked to defeat several bills that would have impacted business severely, such as mandated employee health benefits and mandated parental leave. The majority of positions the committee took on state ballot propositions were upheld by the voters. Issues such as water rights, mandated benefits, corporate taxation, union labor statutes (Davis-Bacon Act), and onerous reporting procedures or regulations were addressed by the committee, and will be addressed again in 1991. The committee employs an independent contractor to prepare an unbiased synopsis of pending legislation, which is distributed to every committee member before the monthly meeting so that all are prepared to discuss the issues and come to a decision on meeting day. The committee intends to join other North Orange County Chambers in sending a NOC delegation to the Spring Legislative Conference in Sacramento in April.

In 1990, the Legislative Committee also presented two public forums for candidates running for office. Candidates at the federal, state and local level were featured at Candidates Night, while City Council Candidates were presented at a monthly breakfast.

Local Issues Committee

Les Jones, Attorney at Law, 1990-1991 Chairman

This committee studies issues at the city and county level and makes recommendations to the Board. Many meetings are informational in nature, offering insight into future growth plans, local problems, city ordinances, etc. Specific problems or issues are often discussed as the "topic of the day." City Council members take turns attending. City staff and department heads also attend frequently. This committee offers an excellent opportunity to get to know elected officials and city policies first-hand. It offers the business community the opportunity to share concerns and ideas with elected officials. In 1991, city departments will be featured on a monthly basis, with supervisors asked to outline the goals and objectives of the department, their budget, functions, numbers of employees, etc.

Transportation

Allene McDowell, Kirkhill Rubber Company, 1991 Chairman

Transportation is the number one problem facing Orange County today, and it impacts businesses severely. Meeting AQMD standards, getting employees to carpool or take public transit, just getting your customer to your place of business are all vital concerns. This committee works with established agencies and also with the Legislative and Local Issues Committees to discuss traffic impacts and solutions for Brea employers. In November, the Chamber supported Measure M, calling for a county-wide 1/2 cent sales tax to be used for transportation improvements. The measure was approved after being defeated in two earlier attempts. The Brea Chamber will continue to monitor transportation and examine how Measure M funds are being spent.

Economic Development Committee

Ray Larson, Larson Associates, 1991 Chairman

The Chamber has worked with a city-sponsored Economic Development Committee for the past several years and will continue to do so. However, a separate Chamber committee will be formed in 1991 to explore methods of retaining existing businesses in the city and recruiting new ones. The committee will continue to work with the city's EDC.

Marketing & Public Relations

George Delanoy, Brea Travel,

1990-1991 Chairman

Dennis Chapman, UNOCAL Land & Development Corp., 1991 Co-Chairman

This committee works to improve membership recruitment and retention and oversees all marketing materials produced by the Chamber. Member surveys such as the one undertaken in 1990 are one way to determine what benefits and services are most desired by members. Over 25% of Chamber members responded to the survey, offering valuable input about new directions the Chamber should be exploring. The committee will continue to survey the membership on a regular basis and recommend new programs and services accordingly.

George Delanoy, Marketing Chairman, Marcia Romanik, Graphic Designer, and Tom Murray of Embassy Suites, cover advertiser, show off the new city map published in 1990.

Public relations will also play a key role in the 1991 program of work. A weekly cable television news show is being considered, and advertising would be made available to Chamber members. More community outreach is planned for 1991 also. The Chamber will develop a formal public relations program in the year ahead. At a time when slow-growth and environmental concerns are at a premium, the business community must do more outreach to the resident community and be more community-minded.

Publications Committee

George Delanoy, Brea Travel, 1990 Chairman
Todd Beckley, Memory Garden Memorial Park, 1991 Chairman

All Chamber publications are coordinated by this volunteer committee, using Chamber members for all aspects of production when possible. 1990 saw the completion of another very successful Business Directory and Shopping Guide, a City Map and Hospitality Guide, the monthly newsletter, and many other publications such as the city's Economic Profile and Industrial Directory. It is the goal of the committee to produce the highest quality publications while keeping advertising rates as low as possible for members. 1991 will see a new edition of the Business Directory, with advertising sales (limited to members only) beginning in March. The finished product will be distributed to every home and business in Brea.

Seminars and Peer Counseling

Bill Murray, Home Bank, 1990 Chairman
Stu Lerner, Lerner & Associates, 1991 Chairman

The Chamber will continue to offer high-quality continuing education for its members, especially in the areas of personnel and human resources, financing, business planning, and marketing. The Chamber may work with one or more neighboring organizations to co-produce the seminar series in 1991. This worked well in 1990, when Brea teamed with the Placentia and Yorba Linda Chambers of Commerce to present the second annual "Disaster Preparedness" seminar.

Another project that will be implemented in 1991 is a business-to-business counseling program. Chamber business owners and managers can sign up to provide one hour of free counseling in their area of expertise to fellow members at no charge. This program has been very effective in other Chambers and implementing it will be very exciting.

Networking/Member Retention

Barbara Brown, New York Life 1991, Co-Chairman
Cathryn Martin, Brea Community Hospital, 1991 Co-Chairman

A new committee planned for 1991. Members will call on other Chamber members - new and long-term - to find out if they are taking advantage of the services the Chamber has to offer, and encourage them to attend events and get involved in Chamber activities. This committee will work with the Marketing Committee by passing on input they receive from the calls they make. Calls will be made both in person and on the phone. Marketing and sales professionals are encouraged to join the committee. Those who are out in the field calling on clients can take a moment or two to ask a few questions about Chamber involvement. The group will also look into forming some specific networking groups among the Chamber membership.

Business Expo

Brad Lening, Clover Insurance/Joe Florentine, Florentine Associates, 1990 Co-Chairmen
Jo Graves, Bank of America, 1991 Chairman
This event is held annually to allow Chamber members to show off their goods and services to the general public. Formerly held in the Brea Mall, it has been held in two different shopping centers during the past two years. Goals for 1991 include finding a permanent home for the event, a regular date, and hopefully tying it in with an existing city-wide event to help with publicity and promotion. Some special interest shows may also be considered on a one-day or one evening basis.

Mixers

John Ewald, Highlander Printing, 1990 Chairman
Fred Browns, Browns Construction/Marilyn Richards, Cobblestone Services, 1991 Co-Chairmen

Mixers continue to be the most popular Chamber networking function. Held on the second Wednesday of each month at a member business, Mixers in 1991 attracted about 150 people on most occasions and more in some months. 1991 will see some changes, specifically a flat fee for entry that will include beverage service and raffle tickets. Sincere thanks to these firms who generously hosted Mixers in 1990:

Diversified Printing & Publishing
Vista Del Plaza Apartments
Mandel Jewelers
TIPS-Interprint
Brea Village Travel Aiders
Embassy Suites Hotel
YWCA of North Orange County
Olen Pointe
Silverwood's in the Brea Mall
Genie Carpets
Brea Stationers
Residence Inn Hotel
Southern California Bank
Boys & Girls Club of Brea
Brea Plaza Merchants

Mixers are one of the most popular networking opportunities offered by the Chamber.

Membership Breakfast Series

Agnes Porter, Porter Mods, 1990 Chairman
Gene Mills, La Villa Realty, 1991 Chairman

The monthly Early Bird Membership Breakfast series was also well-attended in 1990, with many excellent guest speakers and some special programs. April saw a salute to the education community, and May honored Brea Police and Fire personnel. November offered a "networking only" format that allowed members to introduce themselves and tell about their businesses. City updates were featured at most programs, along with announcements by area clubs and organizations about upcoming events. December ended the year on a high note with another very fun Holiday Luncheon. 1991 will bring some changes to the traditional format. The committee is working to recruit the highest caliber speakers and offer more networking opportunities. Every effort will be made to liven up the program and get everyone out the door promptly at 8:30 a.m.

Diplomats Committee

Carole Wilson, CPA, 1990 Chairman
Janie Williams, JW Enterprises/Bud Walker, Century 21 Realty, 1991 Co-Chairman

This committee serves as the "meeters and greeters" of the Chamber, attending special events such as ribbon cutting ceremonies, anniversary and ground breaking events, as well as regular Chamber events such as mixers and breakfasts. They work with new members to help them get acquainted and involved. Diplomats made an impressive showing in 1990, attending over 35 special events in addition to regular Chamber functions. Diplomat of the Year awards are presented each year at the Installation Banquet to the committee members who made outstanding contributions during the preceding year.

Karl Schwab Business Merit Award

Carol Weddle, Neel's Brea Mortuary, 1990-1991 Chairman

This award is presented annually to the Brea business man or woman who has made outstanding contributions to the business community through their volunteer activities and leadership abilities. Nominations are solicited from individuals and service clubs and the award is presented at the annual Installation Banquet. 1990 winner was Todd Beckley of Memory Garden Memorial Park.

Golf Tournament

Janie Williams, JW Enterprises, 1990 Chairman

George Peniche, Peniche & Associates Insurance
Dennis Chapman, UNOCAL Land & Dev. Co. 1991 Co-Chairmen

The 1990 Golf Tourney was held at Alta Vista Country Club in Placentia and attracted over 100 golfers. This is a wonderful networking event and also serves as a fund-raiser for the Chamber. The grand prize of a trip to Jamaica was the highlight of the evening. Brea attorney Joe Carpello was the lucky winner. Special thanks to Elena Perez-Wallace of A-Fare to Travel for making the arrangements and donating half the cost of the trip, and to the following Brea area financial institutions who donated the remainder:

Pioneer Bank
Heritage Thrift & Loan
Home Bank
Union Federal Savings
Southern California Bank
Southland Financial
Coastal Counties Escrow
The Emery Companies- Century 21 Real Estate
Nazarene Federal Credit Union
Southern Baptist Credit Union
Founders Bank

Ribbon Cutting ceremonies and Grand Opening events are another popular service coordinated by the Chamber.

Casino Night

Agnes Porter, Porter Mods/Carole Wilson, CPA, 1990 Co-Chairmen

Carole Wilson, CPA/Don Rapp, Brea Industrial Medical, 1991 Co-Chairmen

The 1990 Casino Night offered a special new treat - a complete buffet supper provided courtesy of Albertson's Distribution Center, with help from Brea Community Hospital, Avila's El Ranchito Restaurant, Millie's Country Kitchen, and Alicia's Catering. HOME BANK was the event's first corporate sponsor, and underwrote expenses for the evening, as well as providing the Grand Prize, a hot air balloon ride arranged through One-Stop Travel Services. 1991 will see the continuation of the buffet dinner, and the committee hopes to attract an even larger crowd. Casino Night is a networking event and a Chamber fund-raiser.

Guests had a great time at 1990 Casino Night, sponsored by Home Bank.

Installation Banquet

George Peniche, Peniche & Associates, 1990 Chairman
Agnes Porter, Porter Mods, 1991 Chairman

Held each January, this event marks the change of Chamber leadership and formally installs directors and officers in their positions for the following year. Recognition is given to those who have contributed to the organization during the past year, and special awards such as the Diplomat of the Year and the Karl Schwab Business Merit Award are presented. The Installation Banquet is the Annual Meeting of the Brea Chamber of Commerce, as prescribed in the bylaws.

Business Education Task Force

Agnes Porter, Porter Mods, 1990 Chairman
Bernie Kilcoyne, Auto Club, 1991 Chairman

This committee works with Brea public and private schools to enhance the educational environment in the city. Businesses participate in a variety of ways. Some "adopt" an entire school and become intimately involved in many aspects of its operation. Others choose to make a one-time donation of manpower, supplies, or cash. Whatever the size of your company or your time constraints, the committee can arrange a meaningful partnership with your business and one or more Brea schools. Today's students are the workforce of tomorrow. It is in our best interest to support them to the best of our ability.

Artist in Residence Program

John Sutton, Ad-Visor, 1990-1991 Chairman

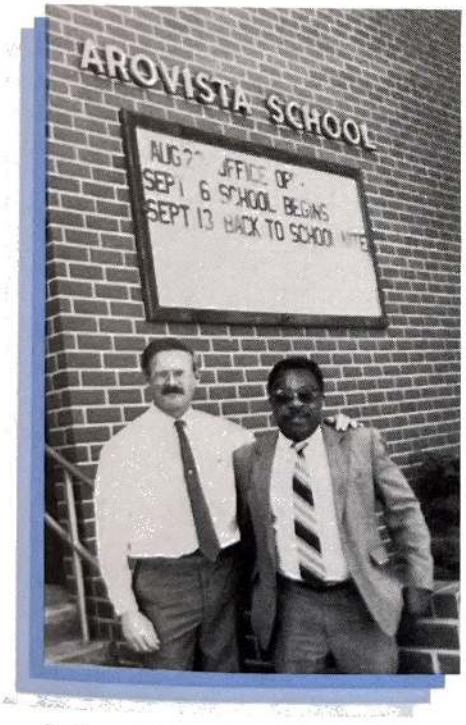
In 1991, the City of Brea will host Mexican artist Carlos Terres for a year-long stint as the city's "Artist in Residence." The Chamber has been asked to prepare a marketing plan for selling the artworks Carlos will produce during his tenure. The goal of the program is to be self-supporting, and a successful sales effort is vital if that goal is to be reached. Several Chamber marketing professionals are meeting to outline a marketing strategy. This provides an excellent opportunity for community service and involvement by the business community. Anyone with sales or marketing background or an interest in the arts is encouraged to join the committee.



Business-Education Partnerships are one popular community-outreach program. Arovista Principal Mark Goldband teams up with Coldwell Banker agent Eddie King to meet Arovista's needs.

Youth Citizenship Awards

Roseanne Holly, Brea Electric, 1990-1991 Chairman

Two Brea students are honored each year at the April Membership Breakfast for outstanding accomplishments at the high school and junior high school levels. Scholarships of $500 and $100 are awarded to the high school and junior high students respectively. Scholarships are underwritten by donations from Brea businesses. A panel of judges screens applications and interviews finalists in person. Donations and committee members are always needed! Join us!

Community Events

Chamber volunteers and staff members have represented the business community on a number of planning committees for various community events, such as the Country Fair, the 4th of July Fireworks Show, the Mayor's Ball, and the Brea Fest. The Chamber has also been a sponsor or participant in many events this year. Chamber staff members regularly attend service club meetings as speakers and guests. Involvement in the total community allows us to present the business community as a partner in community affairs. The Chamber encourages all Brea business owners and managers to be good corporate citizens and get involved with as many community activities as possible.

OUR FUTURE IS HERE

Budget & Finance Committee

Todd Beckley, Memory Garden Memorial Park, 1990 Treasurer
George Delanoy, Brea Travel Service, 1991 Treasurer

The Chamber is managed by the leadership on a very businesslike basis. All major purchases are sent out to bid among members when possible. The Chamber leadership has worked hard over the past five years to put the organization on a sound financial footing and has also managed to establish a reserve fund. Chamber accounts are audited each year by a professional Certified Public Accountant, and copies of the report are available at the Chamber office if any member wishes to examine it. Chamber dues are among the lowest in Orange County for comparable organizations, and the leadership has made a commitment to keeping dues as low as possible while still providing superior service. The Chamber does not receive any government subsidies or funds of any kind. All operating expenses are realized through membership dues and fund-raising activity.

A new computer system purchased in 1990 has cut staff time dramatically, while offering even more services for the membership. A new employee manual was prepared in 1990 as well, bringing the Chamber into compliance with all statutes governing employees. A new employee benefit plan will be implemented in 1991. A new office lease was negotiated with the City of Brea in 1990 for use of the Chamber offices on the Plaza Level of the Civic Center. The Executive Committee, Board of Directors, and Executive Director work together to control expenses and maximize results.

Strategic Planning

Jack Mixner, Strategic Business Services, 1990-1991 Co-Chairman
Wayne Maris, Bill's Lock and Safe Service, 1990-1991 Co-Chairman

A major undertaking started in 1990 was the formation of the Strategic Planning Committee. Using input gleaned in the member survey early in the year, the committee has met as often as twice a month to examine the Chamber program and set goals for the decade ahead. Many changes have been made, and will continue to be made. The committee will meet regularly during 1991 to offer recommendations for new programs and directions.

Reaccreditation Committee

Ray Larson, Larson Associates, 1990 Chairman

The Brea Chamber of Commerce was reaccredited by the United States Chamber of Commerce for another five year period in 1990. The Reaccreditation process calls for examining the Chamber program in minute detail and assessing its strengths and weaknesses. The project began in 1989, and culminated in an on-site visit by Dick Loomis of the U.S. Chamber in April of 1990. He offered suggestions to Chamber leaders about areas that need to be considered for improvement. These recommendations have been addressed by the Strategic Planning Committee.

Bylaws Update

Agnes Porter, Porter Mods, 1990 Chairman

1990 saw the formation of a committee charged with examining the organization's bylaws and making recommendations for change. The bylaws have not been updated since 1980. The major accomplishment of the committee has been to re-write the bylaws in plain English, resulting in a document about half the size of the original and clarifying the meaning of various sections. Recommended changes include a mandate that there be at least 3 more candidates than seats for any Board election, and a clarification of the duties, terms, and responsibilities of officers and directors. The process for nomination of directors and officers has also been clarified and assigned specific time lines. The Board of Directors will consider the amendments in 1991.
Recommendations for reorganizing Chamber leadership will also be considered at that time.

CITY COUNCIL REPORT

Sept. 17 was a night for wheeling and dealing in the City Council.

Brea Councilmembers zipped through a 16-item consent calendar in less than 10 minutes, after discussing several issues earlier during a study session.

Here's is a detailed wrap-up:

BREA HOTEL RELOCATION

The City Council approved, 4-1, to spend about $215,000 to move the Brea Hotel 50 feet south to the Heritage Block as part of the downtown renewal project. Councilwoman Kathy Wiser dissented.

Relocation includes moving the hotel from the middle of the block to the corner of Brea Boulevard and Ash Street.

The City Council in April reviewed the hotel rehabilitation cost study, which identified phase one as relocation and exterior renovation costing $560,684. Relocation could begin as early as November. Exterior renovations won't start until late 1997.

Councilwoman Kathy Wiser questioned whether the cost of relocating and rehabilitating the boarded-up hotel will be more than tearing down the structure and reproducing it. City Manager Frank Benest and Development Services Director Jim Cutts said the two projects are estimated at the same cost, but there my be hidden factors. These costs won't be uncovered until reconstruction begins, Cutts said.

FINGERPRINT INDENTIFICATION

The City Council uanimously approved participation in the county's fingerprint identification system — CAL ID — which links booking records in police departments throughout the county. Brea must supplement the system's $140,000 shortfall for 1996-97 to the tune of $1,862 based on the number of residents served.

The CAL ID system was set up in 1985, with user fees funding enhancement costs. Reductions in fine assesments, decreased enforcment of traffic laws with fewer fines and the county bankruptcy caused this year's shortfall, police said.

Brea Police Chief Bill Lentini said this is the first time in 11 years Brea has paid extra money to the system. CAL ID helped Brea investigators solve three cases this year, one of the most effective uses of law enforcement dollars, he added.

STREET REHABILITATION

Brea's capital improvement budget calls for on-going street rehabilitation throughout the city. The next area up for resurfacing is Mariposa Drive to Hazelwood Place, originally paved in the 1960s.

The City Council unanimously approved installing water lines and reconstructing streets on Orangewood and Mariposa drives, Ponderosa Avenue, and Driftwood and Hazelwood places.

Improvements are scheduled to begin later this month, with the exception of roads in front of Mariposa Elementary School. Work on this street will begin after the school year.

The first part of the project will cost about $592,000, funded with county Measure M street rehabilitation and water fund monies. The Mariposa factor will run about $108,000.

ENTERTAINMENT PERMIT

The City Council unanimously approved an entertainment permit for acoustic music in the courtyard of the strip mall on Birch Street. The permit allows classical jazz and instrumental music to be performed by two musicians from 7-10 p.m. on weekend nights until Oct. 12.

Glenn Okamoto, manager of Renaissance Cafe, requested the permit. Okamoto acted as representative for fellow Marketplace merchants Bookstar, Improvisation Comedy Nite Club, JoJo's Pizza Kitchen and Simply Classic.

BJH BASKETBALL COURTS

The Parks, Recreation and Human Services Commission decided earlier this year to use county grant money to resurface the basketball courts at Brea Junior High.

The projected cost is $257,400. The original cost estimate was $218,115 in July. The Parks and Recreation Commission has about $203,000 in grant money, with about $23,000 coming from the city. Council members approved giving $23,000 to the project at the June 2 meeting.

The City Council unanimously approved funding the $54,000 shortfall. Additional costs were incurred with design, administration and contingency costs. Council members said the project is needed and will be great service to the community.

The project will resurface courts, install new basketball poles, backboards, baskets and nets, and set-up a lighting system for the seven courts. Improvements to outlying areas are also part of the project and include stair, walkway and ramp construction, retaining walls and installing chain-link fences.

Last year he earned the highest rating among the California Coalition in Congress and the third highest in the 435-member House of Representatives for cutting excessive spending. He is the Republican Chairman of the Congressional Porkbusters Coalition, which works to eliminate "pork barrel" spending.

Royce serves on the House International Relations Committee as chairman of the Subcommittee on Africa, and recently returned from a fact-finding mission to several African nations. He also serves on the House Banking and Financial Services Committee as a member of the Subcommittee on Capital Markets, Securities and Government Sponsored Enterprises, and as a member of the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit. President's Message by Carl Clausen, Viking Star Enterprises

Secret Number Eight - Seize the Day

There are many fables and stories about changing challenges into opportunities, or turning the tables against disadvantage, that you could tell as well as I. It is wonderful in business when a competitor underestimates you, casually threatens you, or counts you out. You get to seize these opportunities and to do new and different things.

Be alert for events, trends or changes that provide opportunities. Glen Fed seized the day from Wells Fargo with radio ads by the woman complaining about her bank's bad treatment right after the big bank swallowed another big one. Years ago, a little start-up ice cream company was getting pushed around by a competitive division of a giant food company. They seized the opportunity to make it into a big guy picking on a little guy. Today, Ben and Jerry are very rich guys from their successes in reversing the advantage. There is powerful sentiment for the entrepreneurs and underdogs to succeed against odds.

So what should you do? Be aware, serve your competitor's customer when they cannot. Look for connections between events and your business. Make a point better and clearer before someone else does, steal their thunder by putting a little different spin on things.

How About a Varsity Team?

You know that Brea continues to attract fine and significant companies to locate here. Three times recently companies relocating to Brea have asked the Chamber to provide some kind of orientation for their employees. We cobbled presentations together with the available materials, and recruited some of our members to present them. The audiences of employees really like them. Hats off to Board Member Dick Malme of Wells Fargo Bank and others who pitched in to do a great job in welcoming Arrowhead Water to Brea recently. Reflecting on how well this went on an impromptu basis leads to a couple of questions.

Question: What if the Chamber had a carefully prepared, bang-up presentation that could be tailored to a company's specific needs about working in Brea and living in our area?

MEMORY GARDEN

(714) 529-3961

What if we could give them dynamite hand-outs about housing, schools, businesses (our members) and all the things they want or need to know? What if we could muster a crack team of trained presenters to deliver a "knock your socks off" multimedia presentation?

Answer: Our Chamber would have a unique and innovative program among California cities.

Question: Why would any of our members be interested in tryouts for such a tough assignment?

Answer: Our members are a dynamic, aggressive bunch of go-getters. Those selected would be specially identified as members of a high-energy, varsity team to introduce new companies to the area. They would be able to introduce themselves and their businesses and have their promotional material prominently included in the handout packet at no charge. Have a little fun, maybe get a little business.

Changes? Updates? Corrections? Please let us know!

Be sure to call the Chamber office whenever changes occur in your business. Do you have a new manager or contact person? A new sales rep who should be receiving the newsletter? Have you moved into the suite next door or across town? Maybe you've added new services to your business or changed the focus of your existing services. Maybe that deluxe new phone system you bought caused you to have a new phone number?

Whatever the case, please call and let us know so that we can keep our records up to date. We are now working on the new business directory, and each year we receive calls after publication from members who made changes like those above and forgot to tell us. They are always disappointed that their name, contact person, phone number or address isn't up to date in the book.

Members are called periodically throughout the year to update information and address correction mailings are made annually, but changes take place constantly. Let us know about them!

Please call the Chamber office at (714) 529-4938 and keep our staff informed of changes to your business. You may also FAX information to (714) 529-6103.

Fullerton Savings Opens Brea Office With Gala Reception

A great time was had by all as Fullerton Savings celebrated its 70th year in business with the grand opening of its Brea branch at the July 9 Mixer. Festivities kicked off with a ribbon cutting ceremony, officially opening the new office in the Gateway Shopping Center at Brea Blvd. and Imperial Hwy. Branch Manager Marianne Helbig and her staff rolled out the red carpet, and several officers and directors of Fullerton Savings were on hand to meet Brea Chamber members.

A beautiful party buffet was prepared by Jonathan Lyng of the Brea Bistro, who was back in action after wife Laurie gave birth to a new son, Preston, a few weeks earlier. There was lots of networking, judging from the record number of Bingo cards turned in for the drawing, and the many guests and new members received a warm welcome from Ambassadors and Chamber members.

Door prize donors were Wells Fargo Bank, Pace Leffingwell, Bound to Travel, Sir Speedy Printing, Oil Can Henry's, and Fullerton Savings. The winning Bingo card was turned in by Michelle Green of Graebel Moving and Storage. Collecting $25 each were Cheryl Harmon, also of Graebel, Brian Gilbert of Merrill Lynch, Dick Keating of Fullerton Savings, Mike Joyce of Image Maker Video, and John Carlson of PC Netlinking.

Chamber Mixers are a great way to make new contacts and generate leads for your business. Join us this month at Laurel Walk homes on August 13, where you can tour the new model homes and meet potential clients.

David Cassidy of Page Mart and John Christianson of Oil Can Henry's get acquainted.

Councilman Marty Simonoff helps Fullerton Savings Manager Marianne Helbig cut the ribbon.

Manager Marianne Helbig welcomes guests to the Mixer, left, while Mayor Pro Tem Lynn Daucher chats with our caterer for the evening, Jonathan Lyng of Brea Bistro.

Around Town

Brea Cares: Recent graduates of the "Brea Cares" emergency preparedness program pose at the Brea Civic Center after being sworn in by the City Clerk. Volunteers undergo extensive training in how to deal with emergency situations, such as earthquake. United Ad Label of Brea sent 6 employees to the program! Pictured are Vincent Burke, Josie Cadena, Gabriel Poole, Mary Wells and Joe Labarrere. The Brea Cares Program has been recognized for excellence in disaster preparedness. Formore information about classes, call Anna Cave at (714) 990-7622.

American Heart Association: The American Heart Association's North Orange County chapter recently donated educational materials to area schools to help children learn about how to keep their hearts healthy. Pictured are Pat Ahern, Principal of Country Hills School, and Michael Karnofel of Carden Elementary School in Whittier. The mission of the Heart Association is to reduce the incidence of death and disability due to cardiovascular heart disease and stroke. For more information, Call Chey Hahn, Division Director, at (714) 856-3555.

Mayor Glenn Parker and Councilwoman Bev Perry compare notes after touring the new models at Laurel Walk, located at Poplar and Birch St. Earlier, several new sculptures by artist John Kennedy were unveiled on the site, adding to the city's "Art in Public Places" program. The whimsical statues of human figures that resemble furniture are visible from Birch St., but definitely worth a vist to see them close up.

Yes, Baby Boomers! The Weiner Mobile is still around! Oscar Meyer reps visited the Gateway Shopping Center recently to hold auditions for future television commercials. Brea kids had the chance to sing advertising jingles in front of the camera. Alas, they weren't giving out weiner whistles - it seems the kids waiting in line make too much noise for those auditioning. Darn!

The Business Corner

Substantiating Business Expenses

Courtesy of Lance, Soll & Lunghard, CPAs

The IRS has published temporary and proposed regulations relating to business expenses for travel, entertainment and gifts. The rules confirm an earlier announcement of an increase in the threshold for which receipts are required in order to deduct travel and entertainment expenses. In addition, the IRS has opened the door to more relaxed regulations in the future.

Background: Generally, business travel and entertainment expenses are deductible only if substantiated by:

1) a record of the time, place, amount and business purpose of the expense (and, for gifts and entertainment, the business relationship of the recipient or person(s) entertained); and

2) documentary evidence of the expense, such as a receipt or paid bill.

Similarly, under an accountable expense reimbursement plan, employees can be reimbursed for travel and entertainment expenses only if they submit a record and documentary evidence.

Temporary Regulations: Under the new regulations, employers and employees won't need to be concerned about getting receipts for non-lodging travel and entertainment expenses that are under $75. Previously, the IRS required documentary evidence for travel and entertainment expenses of $25 or more. This change, which was originally announced in 1995, is effective for expenses paid or incurred after September 30, 1995.

Employees are still required to maintain a record of the time, place, amount, business purpose and business relationship for each expenditure. To determine whether documentary evidence is required, each expenditure is considered separately. For example, consider an evening of entertaining a client that costs a total of $120 - $70 for dinner and $50 for tickets to a sporting event. Because each payment is under $75, documentary evidence is not required. However, the employee must still keep a record of the expenses.

Electronic Recordkeeping: The temporary regulations do not require that records be kept in paper form. An electronic system of maintaining the records is generally acceptable if the records are in a retrievable format and provide the information necessary to determine the correct tax liability.

Lodging & Gifts: The increased threshold does not apply to lodging and gifts. Documentation is still required for lodging (regardless of the amount) and for gifts of $25 or more. Taxpayers had requested that the IRS accept credit card statements or charge records as documentary evidence of a lodging expense. The IRS said it wanted to do its best to accommodate taxpayer needs, but it could not consider credit card statements or charge records alone as acceptable documentary evidence because a credit card statement generally will not segregate lodging from other expenses on the same charge, such as meals and entertainment.

The IRS also said it may, in the future, allow employees to account to their employers using an expense account along without the need to submit receipts. We'll keep you informed an any future reductions in paperwork.

Lance, Soll & Lunghard is located at 203 N. Brea Blvd. and can be reached at (714) 672-0022 if you would like more information about this subject.

Financing Available to Small Manufacturers

Small to medium-size manufacturers now have greater access to capital through new financial consulting services recently launched by the California Manufacturing Technology Center (CMTC).

These services were developed by the nonprofit CMTC because of frequent requests for financing from both start-up manufacturers and established companies needing capital to finance growth strategies, according to CMTC President David Braunstein.

The new Capital Raising and Financial Service looks at the manufacturer's financing needs and recommends the best strategies to meet them. Typical assistance includes developing a business plan, preparing documents needed by funding sources, and introducing companies to financial providers.

To date CMTC has worked with more than 425 small to medium-size manufacturers. CMTC assists in the areas of plant modernization, quality certification, product design, systems modernization, business start-ups and improvements, and workforce development.

Small manufacturers have accounted for the majority of manufacturing sector job growth in California and the nation during the past 25 years, and this type of help is needed because smaller firms don't have the technical and business staff of larger companies, according to Braunstein. Consequently, they lag productivity growth of large manufacturers by 30%. CMTC's hands-on assistance calls on over 100 business and technical professionals to help small manufacturers improve their businesses.

Funding for CMTC is provided through the National Institute of Standards and Technology, along with state funding from the California Trade and Commerce Agency, the California Employment Training Panel, and the California Community College system, as well as fees paid for services. Headquartered in Hawthorne, CMTC has regional offices in Burbank, Anaheim, Ontario, Thousand Oaks, Fresno and Sacramento.

To learn more about CMTC and its efforts to help small manufacturers, call (800) 300-2682 or visit their Web site at www.cmtc.com.

You must get involved to have an impact. No one is impressed with the won-lost record of the referee.

of Directors since 1996. He serves on its Executive Committee and is vice chair of its Legislative Action Council.

In 1995 and 1996, Eller organized opposition to a city plan to replace a private ambulance firm with fire department personnel. The effort convinced the city council and mayor not to make the change by pointing out that the city staff did not calculate accurate cost comparisons with the private sector because key salaries of city employees were not included.

This year Eller headed a successful campaign to stop a city staff proposal to adopt a "Community Wage and Benefit Standard." Although the standard was proposed as voluntary, Eller and the San Jose Chamber pointed out it was the first step toward adoption of a mandatory "living wage" ordinance. As a result of their efforts, the labor-backed proposal never passed the committee level to go before the full city council.

Eller also has represented the chamber on such issues as airport expansion, benefit assessment districts, new and expanded business taxes and prevailing wage.

His community activities in Santa Clara County include serving with the Downtown Rotary, as a board member of U Ai Kai (promoting low-cost housing for Asian seniors) and as a participant for several years in the San Jose Chamber's Principal for a Day program.

Eller is among six businesspersons from throughout the state chosen to receive the "Small Business Advocate of the Year" award. The award honors Californians who have shown outstanding leadership in speaking out on behalf of small business on local, state and federal issues.

Issues Updates via Web

Updates on top legislative issues for the California business community are highlighted each week on the California Chamber's home page on the World Wide Web.

In addition to the legislative updates, the home page includes links allowing visitors to jump quickly to pages of the state Legislative Counsel and others offering information about bills and legislators.

Browsers also can jump quickly to the home pages of local chambers of commerce with a Web presence via a directory on the California Chamber page.

California Communities Cutting Costs Through Competition, Privatization Efforts

Competitive practices and contracting out to private sector firms are helping communities up and down California cut government costs.

- The city of Westminster has saved more than $2 million a year from contracting for fire services.
- The city of Hawthorne generated $6.5 million in revenues and improved service by leasing its water system.
- Orange County is providing health care at a fraction of the cost of neighboring counties through competitive contracting.

These and other success stories are highlighted in a handbook just published by the California Chamber in collaboration with the Reason Public Policy Institute, the California Taxpayers' Association and the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Foundation.

"How To" Book

The handbook, Cutting Local Government Costs through Competition and Privatization, highlights "how tos" for government streamlining and lists public officials who are already implementing competition and privatization in various city and county governments. The publication provides examples of best practices and case studies for nearly every major service supplied by local government, including infrastructure, public works, transportation, general administrative services, public safety, health and human services, parks, libraries and recreation.

In addition, the handbook includes guidelines for state-of-the-art contract management and monitoring, as well as six political strategies for organizational streamlining.

Privatization Growing

Privatization of services has been growing in the last decade. The Reason Public Policy Institute reports that between 1982 and 1992, privatization of transit operation and management grew 14 percent, airport operation 16 percent, fleet management and vehicle maintenance 27 percent and hospital management 31 percent.

Nationwide, 70 percent of U.S. cities contract out for all or part of janitorial services, 50 percent for refuse collection services, 37 percent for road maintenance, 32 percent for tree trimming/landscaping and 32 percent for data processing.

Savings from privatization typically range between 10 percent and 60 percent.

To Order

The handbook is available for purchase from the Reason Public Policy Institute, 3415 S. Sepulveda Blvd., Suite 400, Los Angeles, CA 90034, (310) 391-2245. The Reason Foundation home page is at http://www.reason.org.

Small Business Advocate of Year

San Jose Attorney Pushes Cost-Cutting Options

Leading opposition to a proposed city "wage standard" and persuading city leaders to continue an efficient contracting out program are among the activities that earned San Jose attorney James J. Eller the California Chamber's "Small Business Advocate of the Year" award.

Eller is "an active member of the community and is dedicated to its improvement," said Steven J. Tedesco, president and chief executive officer of the San Jose Metropolitan Chamber, in nominating Eller for the award.

Eller, a partner in the firm of Ferrari, Olsen, Ottoboni & Bebb, has been a member of the San Jose Chamber Board

Largest Auto Club in USA Calls Southern California Home

For nearly 100 years, the Automobile Club of Southern California has been a familiar part of Southern California culture and history. Starting with ten auto enthusiasts in 1900, the organizations' 4.5 million members today have made it the largest American Automobile Association (AAA) affiliate in the United States. Although the Auto Club is best known for emergency road service, maps and travel advice, one of the more popular early services was "sign posting."

The Auto Club recognized that directional and street signs were needed to improve driver and traffic safety. Starting in 1905, and continuing into the 1940s, the Auto Club posted thousands of signs along roads in Southern California and as far away as New York and Florida.

What began as a social-oriented club has evolved into an organization with more than 5,600 employees and 70 offices providing a variety of automotive, financial, insurance and travel services to millions of Southern California motorists, including the La Habra office serving Brea.

Today, Auto Club members have access to a selection of quality services and products at a good value, including:

*automotive services - vehicle pricing, purchasing and diagnostic programs *travel services - airline reservations, tour and cruise packages at discounted prices, travel planning, maps and tour books *financial services - AAA Master Card and vehicle financing at competitive rates *access to many Auto Club services 24 hours a day via the Auto Club Web site at www.aaa.calif.com for insurance quotes, travel discounts, books and vehicle maintenance and pricing and other information.

The Auto Club also continues a community leadership role in areas such as driver and pedestrian education, safer roads and cars, uniform traffic regulations, emission controls and drinking and driving education.

With a solid foundation built on its past, the Auto Club continues to evolve, providing services that members value for convenience and quality.

The local branch serving Brea is located at 1700 W. La Habra Blvd. in La Habra and can be reached at (714) 871-8473.

Soroptimist Club Has Busy Agenda

The Soroptimist Club of Brea/La Habra is comprised of about 35 business and professional women from North Orange County who focus on service to the community. The mission of the club is "To raise funds to return to the community in the form of scholarships for high school students and women returning to the workforce, Boy & Girl Scouts, Boys & Girls Club, Widowed Persons Service, Meals on Wheels, YWCA, and STOP-GAP." They also provide helping hands scholarships that enable needy children to participate in community activities, and support other worthwhile causes such as the Women's Transitional Living Center.

The club meets twice a month at noon on the second and fourth Tuesday, at THC Orange County, located at 875 N. Brea Blvd. A variety of fund-raisers and volunteer activities support the club's many causes.

Some recent events include a car rally which raised $1,000 for the Boys & Girls Club, and the North-South Girls Fast Pitch Softball game. Coming up on September 27 is a luncheon at the Crean Mansion in Newport Beach, which will feature guest speaker Stephanie Edwards and the auction of a Thomas Kinkade lithograph. Tickets are $50.00 per person and may be ordered by calling (714) 970-8511.

One project the club is very excited about is a Showcase of plays by STOPGAP, a group that uses role-playing and drama to discuss contemporary issues facing teens and children in the community. A preview of plays that will be presented during the coming school year will take place on Monday, September 22 from 6:30 - 8:00 p.m. at the Curtis Theatre in the Brea Civic & Cultural Center. Call Clarice Blamer at (714) 256-4606 if you would like to attend.

"In addition to our community service activities, the club brings together a support system for business women and fosters wonderful new friendships," says President Jill Kimble. "We have an incredible group of dynamic women in Soroptimist." The club is always on the lookout for prospective members. If you would like to attend a meeting, please call Jill at (714) 255-9636.

Landmark Communications Wins National Design Award

Landmark Communications was named a recipient of the Apex '97 Award of Excellence for the creation of promotional marketing material for the Double Deck mini-van cargo shelf.

The Diamond Bar marketing and communications company, formerly known as Landmark Desktop Publishing, was honored in the Ninth Annual Awards for Publication Excellence, a competition for communications professionals conducted by Communications Concepts, of Springfield, Va. More than 4,190 entries vied for honors in 12 categories. Judging was based on excellence in graphic design, editorial content and the success of the entry.

Landmark Communications' winning entry was in the "Brochures, Booklets & Catalogs" category. Among other Apex '97 winners were entries from Texas Instruments, United Parcel Service and HBO and Company.

Landmark Communications' four-color entry included a presentation folder containing flyers targeted to market segments, an oversized tri-fold brochure and sales letters, also targeted to product niches. The marketing packet was used in the nationwide product launch earlier this year of the Double Deck mini-van cargo shelf, developed by R & G Enterprises, LLC, of Hacienda Heights.

"We found Landmark's work innovative, effective and sharply focused," R & G president Timothy Rosenfeld said. "It has proven to be a very powerful marketing tool, instantly giving our new product a strong industry identify and presence."

Apex judges said the ninth annual competition "displayed an exceptional level of quality...The judges had the extremely difficult task of selecting the award-winning entries."

Landmark Desktop Publishing was established in 1995 by Mark Landsbaum, a former award-winning writer and reporter for the Los Angeles Times. The firm designs and writes marketing materials including direct mail, web pages, speeches, advertising and award-winning newsletters. In June Landsbaum changed the name of the company to Landmark Communications to reflect its growing emphasis on writing, as well as its continuing design solutions for clients' marketing challenges.

HISTORY OF BREA

Brea, "The Balanced Community", is unique when compared to other communities in Southern California.

In other communities one finds pavement, automobiles, homes and people all mixed together as if by a hurricane. Brea is unique because it has grown slowly enough to avoid the problems often confronting other exploding Southern California cities.

Brea is also unique in its atmosphere. Many people move to Brea because it reminds them of a small community that they may have lived in at one time or another. In Brea, you can walk down the street and count on seeing someone you know. And yet, with its many small-town qualities, Brea is close to the many features that make Southern California one of the finest places in which to live in the United States.

Brea is unique in its history. It dervies its name from the Spanish word which means "tar" or "asphalt". Settlers from the Pomona and Santa Ana valleys came to the Brea Canyon to cut chunks of the oil-soaked earth for use as fuel in heating their homes. Oil has continued to play an important role in the development of Brea from the many oil fields which were developed at the turn of the 20th century to the oil-related industries now located in Brea. It is these industries along with the beautiful homes in Brea which give it the motto--"The Balanced Community"--something which many communities strive for, but few achieve.

Yes, Brea is unique. The planned widening of Imperial Highway and the construction of the Orange Freeway will spur a more rapid growth in Brea in the next decade. However, it is the hope of many Brea residents that it will continue to maintain its unique qualities as it increases in size.

FIRE: There is a trade-off for living in country

FROM 1

"It's nice to live out here a little away from the mainstream hustle and bustle, but there's a price you have to pay," he said. "Just because there's a fire doesn't mean you pick up and leave."

Jim and Ginny Hensel did just that, temporarily however, when fire beared down on their Hollydale Mobile Estates home in 1985.

Firefighters were scouting from the Hensel's back yard overlooking the confluence of the Carbon Canyon and Soquel Canyon creeks as the couple packed up photo albums, family genealogy records, jewelry and a couple changes of clothes.

Fortunately, the Hensels' home was not damaged in the conflagration, which burned 1,500 acres. They returned the next day and have no intent of leaving permanently from fear of fire.

Many of their neighbors feel the same way, according to Jim Hensel.

"Everyone loves living here," he said. "It's a piece of the country in the city."

The fire in their eyes

Brea families live with constant fear

By Toby Hill
North County News

Frank Sulick was having a birthday party for his wife Loralee when he saw the flames on the hill overlooking their Olinda Village home.

A guest hurriedly called the fire department.

Everyone else just partied on, watching the fire that last week went on to blacken 800 acres of grassy hillsides,

The casual attitude is borne not so much out of brashness as it is from a familiarity with fire, which is about as common as coyotes in this rural neighborhood nestled among the hills of Carbon Canyon.

Four major blazes have skirted the area since 1990. Two of those occurred within the last eight months. Another three scorched the dry wilderness in the late '70s and early '80s.

Miraculously, no homes have been destroyed.

And the fires have come close. Real close. Fire crews lit backfires from the edge of the Sulicks' front yard to head off the encroaching June 25 blaze.

Residents in the 100-home community don't appear to fear fire so much as they regard it as something to expect when living so close to nature.

"If I was extremely phobic about fire, obviously I wouldn't live here," said Roger Thrall, who has lived at the northern end of Olinda Village for 23 years. "That doesn't mean you be blase about it though," he added.

Fires are kind of like the rattlesnakes Thrall's dog contends with in the backyard — you don't live in constant fear of them, but you learn to keep an eye out.

Thrall's home, a charming ranch-style house on Lilac Lane that backs up to an expanse of dry, open fields, caught fire Nov. 16, 1980 after a child's model rocket ignited one of the most damaging blazes to sweep through Carbon Canyon.

Strong Santa Ana winds blew the intense fire from Chino Hills into eastern Brea, charring 8,500 acres along the way.

As fire crews batted the flames back from Thrall's home, winds blew burning embers onto his wood-shingle porch roof. A neighbor spotted the small blaze quickly, however, and extinguished it before much damage was done.

But the 1980 fire and the succession of ones that followed have never made Thrall want to move away from the neighborhood where he has raised steers and kept horses he often rode into the neighboring hills.

Fire is just part of the tradeoff for living in the natural setting Thrall cherishes so much.

DERAILED — Three tanker cars (above) leak chemical fertilizer near Birch Hills Golf Course after skipping their track. Authorities blamed the derailment on ground softened by rain earlier this week. A railroad crossing sign (below), damaged by the accident, oozes into the flooded soil.

Brea tanker spill blamed on rain

By Steve Creech
DSP Staff Writer

BREA — A train loaded with fertilizer chemicals fell casualty to the recent spell of Southland rain when it partially derailed Wednesday, causing a 50-ton spill, authorities said.

At 12:22 p.m., the Brea Fire Department received a call concerning an overturned train at the Brea Unocal plant, next to the Birch Hills Golf Course.

Upon their arrival, fire officials discovered five cars had skipped the track, three of them tanker cars filled with Urea Ammonium Nitrate, a liquid fertilizer.

No evacuations were necessary and no injuries were reported to the train crew or safety personnel at the scene.

"The engineer said he was proceeding at a slow speed, when the tanks came over a portion of the track which had been wetted from the rains." Fire Marshall Bill Simpkins said.

"The track gave away on its right side, and the cars tipped over from the weight of the liquid upon the soft soil."

The train, carrying approximately 20,000 gallons of the material, described by Unocal officials as "non-toxic" and "non-flammable," suffered two leaks from the mishap.

One of the leaks spewed the liquid at a rate of 50 gallons a minute, contributing to the 50-ton spill.

Members of an Anaheim Hazardous Waste Unit assisted the fire department in creating a catch basin lined with plastic to safely route the chemical away from a nearby storm drain. The unit reported no environmental damage from the spill.

According to William Gollhofer, a Unocal administrator and spokesman, the company quickly mobilized vacuum trucks to clean up the area and return most of the chemical from the catch basin back to the facility where it is manufactured.

"There will be no effect on the environment with our containment methods," Gollhofer said.

Simpkins said the train was carrying the fertilizer west out of the Unocal Imperial Highway plant en route to a customer in the Imperial Valley.

He called such occurrences "rare" due to the relatively low amount of railroad activity in the area. The Southern Pacific railroad right-of-way near the Unocal plant is a railroad spur, not a main track, Simpkins said. "The cars could sit here for a while."

The fire department closed Birch Hills Golf course following the incident and remained on the site to oversee clean-up operations.

Chamber celebrates 50th year

By Aaron Boehme
Brea Progress

The Brea Chamber of Commerce kicked off its 50th anniversary celebration last week by reading a letter from its 1945 president, Frank Burrill, who had been tracked down at his home in Northern California.

In his letter, Burrill, reminisced about his days in the chamber and how times had changed.

"Little did I realize that Brea would become such a big and important city," wrote Burrill, who in 1945 signed the articles of incorporation that made the chamber a legal entity.

While the city has changed, the chamber's basic mission has not, said Sherry Norman, the chamber's current executive director.

"The city and the chamber are more organized and much more sophisticated, but the basic goals of community betterment, keeping a good business climate and economic prosperity — those things are pretty universal and will keep on going," she said.

To further celebrate it's history, the chamber is planning several special events throughout the year. Although plans are not yet complete, Norman said one aspect will be that "old-timers and long standing members" will be honored at the chamber's normal activities.

At the installation breakfast, the chamber honored businesses that have been members for more than 25 years. Familiar names like Southern California Edison, Pacific Bell and First Interstate Bank, all of whom joined in 1961, were among the oldest members. But Richard Blake, O.D., a member since 1952, had them all beat by almost a decade.

Norman is also trying to get longtime members, former members and past presidents to write columns in the chamber's monthly newsletter, The Brea Communique.

Coincidentally, the Brea Historical Society will be doing an exhibit on business in Brea this year, Norman said.

Burrill is one of the old-timers Norman hoped to honor. Even though it had been meeting unofficially for years and even helped establish the City of Brea's legal status, the chamber itself did not incorporate to get legal status until Burrill's presidency.

The chamber first met March 27, 1913, when 62 local businessmen gathered at Olsen's Cafe and elected Harry Ray, the manager of the Stern and Goodman store, as their president and "Boost Brea" as their theme.

One of the group's first activities was to push for electric street lights in Brea, a dream that was realized in July, 1917, four years after the first meeting.

The chamber was also instrumental in negotiating with local oil companies for land that would allow Brea to incorporate as a city, another 1917 event. And two years later, when the new city needed a slogan, the Brea chamber was there again, with "Oil, Oranges and Opportunity."

the reward money and sent the spire back to the Maintenance Department.

According to Saul, various locations for the returned spire have been debated over the past months.

"At one time, there was even talk of placing it somewhere in the downtown area," he said.

But a final decision has been reached. As of June 9, visitors to Old City Hall Park can view twin spires — the Lagos-crafted replica atop Old City Hall and, the original spire making its second appearance on the gazebo.

Saul said a rededication of the spire is planned as part of the city's Fourth of July activities.

Chamber, city make Brea business's friend

By Jeff Rowe
The Orange County Register
From Brea

It's the little city that does.

Sometimes lost in the seamless sprawl where Orange, Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Riverside counties come together, Brea is forging an identity as perhaps Orange County's most accommodating business address. Other towns talk about being a pal to business, but Brea gives it a hug.

Consider, for example, the case of the Texaco station snack bar.

Shortly after Said (pronounced Sy-eed) Abuqartoumy leased the station on Imperial Highway 16 months ago, he presented plans to modify the building to comply with new laws requiring improved access for disabled people. Abuqartoumy, who arrived in the United States from Jordan with $800 in 1979, had already spent $20,000 landscaping the station, which pleased neighboring businesses and helped lure customers.

But he ran into a regulatory thicket with his plans, which also included a modest expansion of the snack bar. Trouble was, the previous lessee hadn't obtained permission for a snack bar of any size.

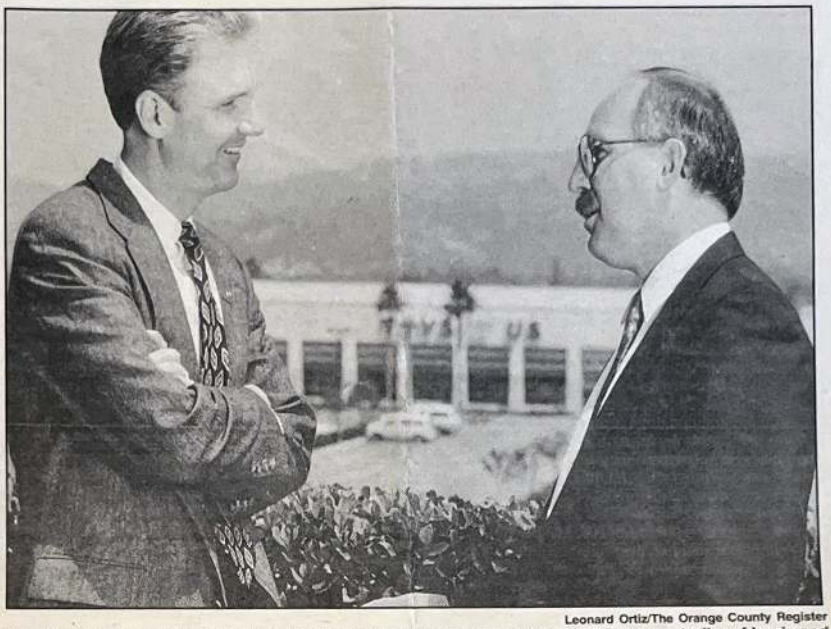
But Abuqartoumy didn't become another bureaucratic casualty. Sherry Norman, executive director of the Brea Chamber of Commerce, quickly met with him and city authorities, and although a few details remain to be resolved, Abuqartoumy's $150,000 renovation and snack-bar expansion look to be on course.

"Had (the chamber) not helped me, I would be on the street," Abuqartoumy said.

The effort is typical of Brea's can-do attitude toward retaining its business base.

"They are certainly effective at it," said Phil Miller, district representative for Assemblyman Ross Johnson, R-Fullerton, whose district covers much of the north county. "Other cities work at it but none seem able to get the same rate of return."

Moreover, Brea's regional outlook, good schools and pleasant atmosphere attract and hold companies, said Sterling Fox, field representative for state Sen. Frank Hill, R-Whittier, whose district includes much of the south and central county. "They (Brea) always have taken the large view of things."



Leonard Ortiz/The Orange County Register

These days, Brea's business-retention program is largely in the hands of Bill Murray, president of the Chamber of Commerce and a roving ambassador, negotiator and problem-solver for businesses. He is vice president and manager of the Landmark Bank branch in Brea.

Over the years, Brea has encouraged commercial development to a degree perhaps unmatched elsewhere in the county. Although Brea has only about 33,000 residents, its daytime population is nearly triple that as workers and shoppers stream in from surrounding areas.

But in becoming a friendly place for business, Brea has made some enemies.

Last month, an Orange County Superior Court judge ruled that the city violated government codes when it moved hundreds of displaced households and businesses as part of its $110 million redevelopment plan. Work has been halted until a relocation plan for those businesses and residences is approved.

Murray acknowledges that mistakes have been made but wants to see the redevelopment work completed.

Not content for the chamber to be a dispenser of maps and organizer of socials, Murray, other chamber officials and city authorities visited about 20 of Brea's largest employers from April to June, startling some when they asked, "How are things and how can we help?"

The approach has worked.

Although it had been a fixture in Brea for 40 years, Kirkhill Rubber was tempted by low costs in states such as Arizona and New Mexico. Departure of the maker of industrial rubber parts could have meant a loss of 700 jobs.

But Ray Larson from the chamber and Ret Wixted, the city's director of community services, visited the company, assuring Vice President Larry Gadaire that the city and chamber would do all they could to encourage regulatory agencies to reduce the maze of restrictions.

Kirkhill no longer ponders moving. "This is where we want to stay," Gadaire said. "Brea is a good place to do business."

The city's efforts to retain companies illustrate that although underlying business concerns such as workers' compensation and myriad regulations are state issues, responsive city officials can make a difference.

Lacking the cache of Newport Beach or the crossroads location of Santa Ana, Brea nonetheless has steadily expanded its business base in recent years. The city currently counts 2,500 business licenses, up from 1,750 in 1987. Most are small enterprises, but large employers include a research unit of Unocal Corp., Sundstrand Aviation, Mercury Insurance Group and Lucas Western Electro Systems.

The experiences of Louis and Co. illustrate how small actions by city officials can make a difference.

When the distributor of cabinet hardware and woodworking supplies presented plans for its new office and warehouse, city engineers volunteered to meet with the architect and builder to help make sure the building was seismically safe.

"Not one screw fell off the shelf in the last earthquake," said Ed McGraw, the company's controller.

And when McGraw was having trouble getting a customer who had written several bad checks to return calls, he took the checks to Sgt. Thomas Flenniken, a detective with the Brea Police Department.

"Flenniken called, and funny, the guy came right up with the money," McGraw recalled.

Another time, Louis and Co. suspected that an employee was stealing inventory. A police officer agreed to pose as a buyer and the employee was promptly arrested.

In another instance, the company wondered what to do with an expected overflow of cars for a trade show it scheduled. A few telephone calls and the city issued special parking waivers.

Louis and Co. also has operations in Dallas, Phoenix and San Diego, but McGraw says officials from those cities have never contacted the company.

As responsive as Brea has been to business, the problems of high costs and stringent environmental regulations remain unresolved. City and chamber officials realize that being friendly may not be enough.

"We would like to to be able to say we closed deals, but until the underlying problems are resolved, we may have our most important sales presentations ahead of us," Murray said.

Other states find less-than-expected interest from businesses at OC expo

By Jeff Rowe
The Orange County Register

Just how anxious are Orange County employers to move out?

Although recent studies citing the area's relatively high costs and maze of regulations have warned of a procession of businesses leaving the state, attendance at a three-day relocation expo last month in Anaheim suggested that perhaps the concerns are overwrought.

Recruiters from 28 states were ready to make deals at the Business Expansion & Relocation Expo, but representatives from just 200 companies attended, a fifth of what organizers expected.

Joyce Savocchio, mayor of Erie, Pa., was there extolling the virtues of her city.

"I'm a salesperson," she said, showing pictures of pristine beaches meeting azure Lake Erie waters.

"The place where it's happening is the Great Lakes," she said, noting that the lakeside city has begun work on two industrial parks.

Savocchio and other exhibitors spent more time talking to each other than to potential movers.

Most of the recruiters clearly were drawn by perceptions that many California businesses are feeling battered by natural and man-made events.

Still, California officials reacted stoically to the expo.

"It's another element in California bashing," said Julie Meier Wright, director of the state Department of Commerce. Strolling along the aisles of exhibits, Wright conceded, though, that California needs "to reach out to companies."

Chamber's goals

To keep business in the city, Brea's Chamber of Commerce has established several goals:

- Keep its redevelopment program moving.
- Reach out and involve companies in problem solving.
- Foster greater cooperation in tackling regional and state concerns.

Entrepreneur out to make wheelchairs up to speed

Paralyzed man makes move from aerospace

Recession. Defense spending cuts. The results are tallied in Southern California's bankruptcy filings and unemployment statistics.

And, in more encouraging ways, in the experiences of the likes of Anaheim business owner John Box.

Box's legs have been paralyzed since a motorcycle accident in 1981. He was 17.

But don't consider him disabled. He doesn't.

After his accident, Box attended Fullerton College and California State University, Fullerton, for seven years.

"I'm about a semester away from a BA in about four different fields," he said.

But Box always wanted to own a business, so after a year of research, he launched West Coast Precision in 1989 to manufacture military parts and provide specialized measurement services for aerospace companies.

Accident-settlement money helped fund the enterprise.

"West Coast was profitable, but it was obvious that large aerospace companies were cutting back," Box said. "We didn't have our own product; we relied on the work of others. And they didn't have any work."

During this time, Box and his brother, Mike, were toying with wheelchair designs.

"There's lots of room for improvement in wheelchairs," John Box said, from experience.

Active wheelchair users were always telling him how they'd improve their chairs if they could. Weight. Turning radius. Stability.

Even the space between the handrail and tire. In some models, the space is wider than a finger. Imagine maneuvering to catch a basketball and your finger gets stuck in a wheel.

"It's a simple thing to take care of, but that decision was made (at a competing company) by someone who doesn't sit in a wheelchair," Box said.

With more than 2 million wheelchair users who buy new vehicles every three years or so, improved models could keep a guy busy for a long time.

Each time Box made a prototype, he'd show it to wheelchair athletes, who would send him back to the drawing board with suggested improvements.

The sixth prototype was unveiled at a wheelchair-tennis tournament in Irvine in late 1991.

The fluorescent-painted chair weighed 16 pounds. Its turning radius was 18 inches. Its angled, small 10-speed wheels had an aircraft quick-release axle for easy removal when getting in a car. The foot rest was directly over the front castors for greater stability.

The athletes loved it.

"I was looking for a satisfactory product for the consumer," Box said. "When people ask me who designed it, I say, 'You did.' "

What timing. West Coast Precision was slowly running out of work. But its machinery was suited to making the new wheelchairs.

Colours 'N Motion was in business.

The change suits Box for more than financial reasons.

"The aerospace industry is so cut and dried. This is so much more positive," he said. "The energy we get off selling wheelchairs is so much more than we got from aerospace."

His brother, Mike Box, who works for Colours, agrees.

"Watching people go out and play tennis in one of our chairs and coming back with big smiles, that's great!"

John Box shrugs off suggestions that his efforts are anything but business as usual.

When the doctor told him that he'd never walk again, his initial response can't be printed in a family newspaper.

Then the doctor explained: "Look at this like a mountain. You can either climb it or sit at the bottom."

"What he didn't tell me, but I've learned since deciding to climb, is when you get to the top you look out over a vista of all these other mountains," Box said.

"Everyone's life is like that, whether you're in a chair or not. I'm not doing any better in my life than you are. I'm just living my life."

Box knows as well as any entrepreneur that no business is guaranteed success. But Colours 'N Motion is full of promise.

He's already working on a folding wheelchair and a smaller chair for children.

Within five years he envisions breaking into the electric-chair market and developing other assistance products, such as walkers, for people with disabilities.

"If some product doesn't need improvement, we probably won't get into it," he said.

Bruce Strong/The Orange County Register

Hazardous-materials team members, above, climb over derailed cars to inspect the fertilizer pouring from a tanker, which overturned after Wednesday's derailment on the Birch Hills Golf Course in Brea. A backhoe operator builds an earthen dam at right to hold back chemicals leaking from three overturned tankers. Five cars in all left the tracks; there were no injuries.

'Perfect motto' no motto at all

By Dana Kennedy
The Register

BREA — It just goes to show you can't believe everything you read.

In the latest issue of California magazine, an article devoted to the state's various city mottos explores the frequently offbeat, whimsical or the sometimes bland civic descriptions used as official community slogans.

After citing a number of catchy buzzwords — Del Mar, for instance, is "where the turf meets the surf," Coachella is "Grapefruit Capital of the World," and El Segundo is "second to none," the article's author bestows the title of the "perfect motto" on the city of Brea.

Calling it "nothing gaudy, mind you, the beauty is in its self-effacing simplicity," the writer proclaims the slogan "Good Old Brea" to be "modest, like the city, positive without pretension, a trifle corny, inviting, catchy and just this side of dumb."

Brea's business district uses the motto above, but it's not official.

Dumb or not, the phrase "Good Old Brea" refers only to the small downtown business district and has nothing to do with the rest of the city, according to City Clerk Dorothy Storm.

In fact, the city is so modest it is one of only six Orange County cities that has no official city motto whatsoever. Storm, who said a city motto must be approved by the City Council for it to become official, said, "We've got everything else; I don't know why they never got around to that."

Irvine, La Habra, Los Alamitos, Villa Park and Anaheim are the other cities in Orange County without official mottos, according to reference files at the Santa Ana Public Library.

A spokeswoman for the city of Anaheim said a plan to come up with a slogan is "in development" but until then such unofficial nicknames as "The Hub of Happiness" will have to do, she said.

Elsewhere in the county, officials have come up with city slogans that range from the alliterative — Newport Beach's "Playport of the Pacific" — to the scholarly — Garden Grove's "Absit Invidia" meaning "bear no ill will" — to the overblown — Huntington Beach's "Where Progress Meets the Sea in Fabulous O.C."

As far as Orange County is concerned, the real prize for humility and simplicity goes to Placentia which eschews all hyperbole to declare itself "A Pleasant Place."

WHAT'S BREWING IN BREA

Council appoints city commissioners

Brea resident Bill Madden will serve as a Planning Commissioner, starting in June. Madden, 53, will take over Clay Smith's seat. Smith recently resigned because he was appointed a judge for the Orange County Municipal Court.

Madden, a resource specialist at Brea Junior High School, has volunteered his time to several organizations in Brea, including the Boy Scouts and the Economic Development Council.

"I would like to fully explore the planning process and try to make decisions that are appropriate and most benefit the citizens of Brea," he said.

Also, Kristin St. Clair will replace Denise Keller as a Cultural Arts Commissioner starting this month. Keller resigned from her position when she became a trustee of the Brea Olinda Unified School District.

St. Clair, 48, has lived in Brea for 14 years and has dedicated much of her time to Brea schools.

"I have an interest in it because I think it's very important for people to be involved in the cultural arts," she said.

State of city: Brea in the pink

Mayor Glenn Parker and City Manager Frank Benest provided a sunny outlook for Brea's development and financial standing during their State of the City Address at a Chamber of Commerce breakfast meeting Friday.

Parker discussed the success of the Community Center, the progress of the downtown development, the city's financial stability and the importance of continued public safety.

"Without public safety, the community means nothing," Parker said. "We remain committed to making sure the city is safe."

Parker also talked about the Sphere of Influence — an area of land currently owned by Orange County that "most likely will be annexed to Brea," he said, because of an agreement between the city and county regarding the Olinda Landfill.

Benest discussed the city's budget, noting that the city has $5 million in reserves, which is 15 percent of the general fund. He said the city's goal is to build the reserves to 18 percent by 2000.

Benest also provided an update on the city's residential and commercial development.

"We're trying to stimulate a whole range of housing in Brea, including affordable housing and higher-end housing," Benest said.

Grading will begin this year on the 662-home Olinda Heights development and grading is in progress on the 26-home Classics development on Poplar Avenue and Birch Street, he said.

In terms of commercial development, Benest said Crystal Coach, which specializes in limousine manufacturing, is opening in Brea.

Construction has begun on the Birch Hills development that will house Babies R Us, Wal-Mart, McDonald's and Linens 'n Things.

Benest also discussed the downtown: the first of two Edwards Theaters will be open on Labor Day and one of two parking stuctures will be open in June. He reviewed the downtown Idea Fair, noting that about 1,900 idea cards were generated from the event.

Parker concluded the presentation by encouraging residents to involve themselves in local, state and federal issues that affect Brea.

"As local elected leaders," he said, "we need input from you. We give you a number of vehicles to help you stay informed and in communication with the city. Let us know what we're doing well or what we can improve on."

Happy Birthday

City celebrates 80th

Brea Progress

The city became history 80 years ago.

Men lined a dirt-covered Ash Street to cast their votes to determine whether the small town would be incorporated. Of the 732 residents, 204 voted in favor of the incorporation while 45 voted against.

On Feb. 23, 1917, the state declared Brea the eighth incorporated town in Orange County.

Brea measured about one square mile and consisted of dirt roads, businesses and shops.

Citrus groves, oil fields and ranches skirted the town boundaries.

Brea's first newspaper, the La Habra Valley Progress, was founded on June 20, 1913. Editors delivered the newspaper over dirt roads via motorcycle to a printer in Ontario since Brea did not have proper printing facilities.

The La Habra Valley Progress was purchased in 1915 and the name was changed to the Brea Progress, which eventually merged with The La Habra Star to become The Daily Star Progress.

Brea's Historical Society organized a display to commemorate the city's 80th birthday along with the 70th anniversary of the first graduating class of Brea Olinda High School.

The display features historical relics such as a polished cotton pompon outfit, the original wildcat — stuffed, of course — and pictures, newspaper clips and memorabilia from days of old.

PROTESTS ON WHEELS — Three Brea youngsters lend their support, not to mention their wheels, to the protest Monday night. Many cars passing by during the rush-hour demonstration joined in, with drivers honking horns sporadically.

NEVER TOO YOUNG — Brea youth Autumn Perez steals a page out of Roberto Duran's book as she adds her voice to the many other protesters in Brea's second malathion spraying protest of the month. Officials say more protests are planned, but no dates have been set.

SIDEWALK SCENE — Dozens of rush-hour motorists passed by the malathion protest Monday night at Brea Boulevard and Imperial Highway in a flash, but could not miss the message of the nearly 90 picketers who inhabited every corner of the intersection. 150 people were expected at the demonstration, but organizers were still pleased with the outcome.
